GENERAL INTRODUCTION.

I.

'Venias edera juvenalia cinctus
Tempora cum Calvo, docte Catulle, tuo.'

EVERLASTING gratitude is due to the notary of Verona who rescued from the dust the sole manuscript, so long lost, of his compatriot Catullus; for, possessing this,¹ we possess a diary vividly picturing the life of Rome, just before it was overcast with the grey monotone of Imperialism, in the colours which it wore to the feelings of a young Republican, man of the world, and poet. Catullus had many friends who lived and wrote like himself; but their works met the fate of the authors, and perished before their time. It is most fortunate for us, therefore, that one has escaped, by a hair's-breadth, the general mortality; and it is most fortunate that the survivor is Catullus. For he was especially fitted to represent to us the daily world he lived in, both because his sensibility was singularly pure—embalming its experience in crystal, without stain, shadow, or distortion—and because he belonged to those natures which look neither before nor after, but people and perceive only the present.

Before we consider his works, we may for a moment consider the man. Born after the convulsions of private ambition had begun to shake the over-built Republic, he died at thirty, in time to escape its final downfall. For though a man of letters and of pleasure rather than a politician, and an Italian not a Latin by birth, he had the Roman spirit of independence, and was a good Republican. A verse is quoted to indicate that he apologised for his lampoons on Caesar; the truth is, while he might be proud of Caesar's conquests, he never saw their consequences without passionate disgust. So far from regarding him as anything more than a Roman citizen, he declared that he could sleep comfortably in ignorance whether Caesar had a white skin or a black. But his bile is hottest to see Caesar's minions, Mamurra, 'the Formian cheat,' Porcius and Socraton, 'murrain and lean kine of the earth,' prosper and grow sleek on Gallic and British plunder, while men of birth cringed for a dinner. He went himself to Bithynia, to find better tenants for his purse than its old inhabitants 'the cobwebs,' in the train of the Praetor Memmius—who, if our poet is to be believed, was the last person in the world to have a poem like that of Lucretius dedicated to him,—but returned poorer in every sense except in his vocabulary of curses. Catullus was a good hater, and never shrank from plain speech; but his attachment to his friends was as strikingly sincere—clever spendthrifts, prodigal poets, like himself. The great passion, however, and the poison of his history was his love of Lesbia, or, to take off the mask, Clodia. The sister of Cicero's enemy Clodius, the wife—but suspiciously soon the widow—of Metellus Celer, among three sisters who were the wickedest and most beautiful women in Rome, she bore the palm. Catullus' blind passion lasted long; and, when his eyes were opened, only changed into infatuation. We do not know that he ever was entirely cured of his lunacy; but, if so, when he ceased to be lover he ceased to be poet.

The existing poems cannot be arranged in order of composition. Probably Catullus, like most other poets, began with imitation and translation. But it is necessary to suppose that his brother's death occurred quite early in Catullus' short life—a supposition in which there are difficulties—if we would place the extant translations among his first compositions. As, however, the 'Lock of Berenice's Hair,'¹ the 'Dialogue with a Door,' and the rest of these pieces, are not the best works of Catullus, we must praise them as clever exercises, and pass on to his other poems.

The longest of these is the idyll on the 'Marriage of Peleus and Thetis.' The argument is very simple: the Argo breaking for the first time the silence of the seas—the sea-nymphs rising to the strange sight—the mutual passion of Peleus and Thetis—the solemn betrothal and the marriage scene. First, all Thessaly throngs to see the palace and to admire the marvellous coverlet of the bed, on which was wrought in colours the whole of the story of Ariadne—her winning and desertion—her standing desolate on the shore of Dia, where she utters words of despair and reproach against Theseus—the fulfilment of her curse at Athens—the advent of Bacchus and his train, and her assumption into heaven. Then the tide of humanity passes, and the gods enter: Chiron with garlands of every flower that blows, Peneus with laurel branches, Prometheus still wearing faint scars of his ancient doom—followed by Jove and all the great gods, except Phoebus and his sister. The venerable Fates spin their threads and sing a prophetic song of the great Pelides, while the divine guests sit round and banquet. Alas, that human degeneracy had now banished the gods from earthly scenes! The versification of the poem is as little elaborate as the tale, but is everywhere felicitous. As with the Endymion, to begin this idyll is to read it through; and no quotation would convey the true character of the poem, which is that of perfect continuity.

The ‘Attis’ shows the orgiastic madness and wild flight of some worshippers of Cybele from their homes in Greece to the sacred forests of Phrygia. The rapidity and vehemence of the verse, corresponding to the subject, make no pause until the end. No English metre gives any such impression of intensity and speed. A few lines, when the passion is quieter, may be translated :—

‘As soon as the wayworn company set foot on Cybele’s demesne, spent with travel and fasting they fell asleep; and while their eyelids were steeped in dull slumber’s relaxing swoon, rest gently charmed away the fever and frenzy of their souls. But when the golden-visaged sun flashed forth his eyes and began his survey of clear white sky, solid fields, and the waste of ocean, and routed the shades of night before the rattling hoofs of his new-risen steeds,—that moment Sleep hastily took flight from the waking Attis, and rested not till he found a haven in Queen Pasithea’s bosom.’

Waking brings repentance; but repentance is rebellion against the goddess, who appears in her chariot, drawn by lions, to execute vengeance. The poem thus closes :—

‘Cybele spoke thus in anger; her hands drew back the yoke, and the monster, summoning his might, sprang furiously forward. Roaring in the chase, crashing through the under-wood in his wild career, he came to the moist expanse of the foam-fringed beach, discovered unmanned Attis by the bright waters’ edge, and rushed upon him. Blind with terror he fled into the fastnesses of the forest, and there remained in bondage for ever, until he died.

Great goddess, goddess Cybele, goddess and queen of Dindymus! Grant, dear mistress, that thy fever may never light upon my house: choose others for that headlong rout, drive others on that passionate pilgrimage.’

The ‘Peleus’ and ‘Attis’ have been thought to be translations; if this be so, they have entirely superseded their originals.

The two 'Marriage Songs' may now be mentioned. One of these has no special occasion, or at least contains no names. The form is that of a dialogue between the parts of a double chorus—the young men invoke, the maidens reproach, the evening star; the latter sing the beauty of virginity, the former the praises of the married state. Maidenhood, the maidens say,

'is a flower that grows in a corner within garden walls, never discovered by flocks, never bruised by the plough; to which the breezes add sweetness and the sun strength and the rains stature.'

Not so, their antagonists reply; say rather—

"an unwedded vine, struggling on an unsheltered soil—never able to raise her head, unblest with a full-grown offspring of ripe grapes, her delicate frame bowing and tottering forward until the topmost tendril has already clasped the root."

Catullus' mastery of the language of flowers brings him nearer than any other classical poet to modern feeling. For in the other Epithalamium, written for the marriage of Manlius to Vinia, the bride stands pre-eminent among the beauty of the world—

'as the stately hyacinth-bloom rises in a rich man's many-coloured garden of flowers.'

And again—

'He shall be folded in thy embrace as closely as the limber vine flings her tendrils about the elm that is planted by her side.'

Continuous rapid music characterizes this Hymeneal

as it characterizes the 'Attis.' The verse is of the lightest texture known to Latin poetry. The invocation of the deity, the welcome to the bride, the assurance of a happy future and the adieu, are full of delicate imagination, simply and gracefully expressed. The whole is unique in Latin if not in all literature.

We are sometimes inclined to assume that certain capacities and feelings, generally such as may be considered laudable, are peculiar to our own age or even to our own country. Thus the interpretative sympathy with inanimate nature has been thought to be a modern faculty, and the sentiment of home an English virtue, exclusively. Both of these insularities of opinion are reproved by Catullus; for both the qualities were elements of the old Italian spirit which he breathed. Tongues in trees and the passions of the flowers were as intelligible to him as to us, although they played a properly subordinate part, and were not allowed perpetually to intrude themselves, in his poetry. A few passages will be sufficient to show that he could understand the language of nature. He proved his possession of the power of interpretation when he wrote of 'the woods of Cytorus, where the leaves talk in whispers,' or showed how, in the agony of destruction,

'the oak flings her arms aloft, and drops of sweat stand on the bark of the pine.'

The bride, in the Epithalamium, is as fair and dear

‘as the myrtle branches, blossom-laden, which the wood-nymphs feed with honey-dew, to be their toy.’

When he himself was disenchanted, his love

‘fell, as the flower on the skirt of a meadow falls, when the passing ploughshare has swept over it.’

In earlier times, while he still drank of the ‘bitter-sweet’ cup of passion, he sang of kisses

‘multitudinous as the stars which, while night holds her breath, peer upon stolen loves.’

Finally, the fineness of his susceptibility to natural effects is established by this description, even if it stood alone, of the sea at daybreak :—

‘At first, as the waves move in slow procession at the command of the lenient breath of morning, they ring muffled chimes of laughter ; but, when the gale freshens, they crowd faster and faster on, and fling back the splendour as they float far away in front of the crimsoning day.’

In the second place, the creditable weakness, which we are not ashamed to impute to ourselves, of fondness for home, was freely confessed and tenderly exemplified by Catullus in the following poem, which he composed on returning, fatigued with travel, to his retreat on the Lago di Garda :—

‘Sirmio, brightest jewel of all forelands or islands that have been begotten, in pellucid mere or on the illimitable ocean, by either water-god, how willing and how pleased am I to come home to you ! My senses scarcely persuade me that I have escaped from Thynia and the Bithynian steppes ; that all is safe, and I am looking upon you. Can there be a greater blessing than when the cords of care are snapt, and the mind lets slip its burden—when, spent with toil in far-off places, we come to our home sanctuary and find rest on the long-dreamed-of couch? This moment is cheaply bought even by such costly pains. Welcome, lovely Sirmio! make merry before your master! make merry too, ye waves of the water of Lydia! and let every jocund echo with which home is haunted break into laughing!’

II.

‘Odi et amo.’

WE pass now to the consideration of the personal poems of Catullus, in which he has immortalized, by truthfully recording, his sincere affections, passionate love, genuine hatreds, clear wit, and hearty merriment.

It was truly felt at this period, by all who were not content to pass their lives in lethargy, that there was only one place on earth where active existence was possible to a man; that it was better to struggle and starve at Rome than batten on the pastures of all the rest of the world. There, and there alone, could be found news, amusement, political agitation, society—in a word, a life worth the trouble of living. How much more enjoyment than could be afforded by the stalled ox of provincial dulness was promised to himself by Catullus, when he invited his friend to dine with him off wit and a bare cupboard, in these lines:—

and funds of laughter. Bring only these, as I bid you, our prince of good fellows, and you shall dine nobly: for your Catullus' purse teems—with cobwebs. But you shall get in return the essence of delight, or a something still more fragrant and dainty. For I will give you a balm, vouchsafed to my mistress by the Loves and Joys: once you catch its odour, you will fall on your knees to the gods, and beg them to transform you into absolute nose!

We are told by Juvenal that the worst of poverty is that it makes men ridiculous. Following the canon that most satire is as untrue as it is uninteresting, we may believe that the absurdity of poverty is its only palliative, and sense of humour the best fortitude. At any rate Catullus, with empty and disappointed pockets, could laugh at himself:—

‘As I idled in the square, my friend Varus carried me away to see his mistress; whom I rather abruptly discovered to be as full of wit as she was charming. When we arrived, we talked after a desultory fashion, until Bithynia came on the carpet—its present state and prospects, and how my purse had prospered there. I answered, with simple truth, that there was no chance for governors, much less for subalterns, to come home with larded locks—least of all when the people knew their governor for a scoundrel, and did not care a straw for the staff. “But still,” said they, “at any rate you provided yourself, with what is believed to be a natural product of your province, bearers for your chair.” Adopting the tone of a man of means in presence of the lady, “No,” said I, “I was not quite so miserably off, although I had fallen into a poor province, as not to set up half-a-dozen straight-backed fellows.” That was a bounce: for I never had a creature, at home or abroad, able to shoulder an old bed leg. Upon this she asked me, playing her wicked part to perfection, “Dear Catullus, may I beg the loan of your bearers for a little while? for I want to go in state to the feast of Serapis." "Truce!" cried I to the lady, "when I spoke just now of chattels of mine I was not thinking. My dear friend, Caius Cinna, is the nominal purchaser: but whether things are his or mine is all one to me; for I use them as freely as if I bought for myself. You, however, are a mischievous dunce and a plague, for you do not forgive a slip of the tongue."'

Catullus' firm and close attachment to his friends is one of the leading traits of his character. The feeling of friendship was elevated by him into devotion, demanding a complete and fervent faith on both parts, and imposing in action a circle of attentions as obligatory as religious exercises. Breach of duty was not a sentimental injury, but sacrilege; an unfaithful friend was not fickle, but an apostate. Such an apostate the Varus¹ of the preceding poem proved to be. Catullus shows in the following lines how deeply he felt the blow:—

'Unfaithful Alfenus, betrayer of companions so linked together, has your hard heart no compassion left for your once-cherished friend? Do you not tremble to cast me off, and break your vows, like a traitor? Treachery is irreligion, and finds no favour with the gods. Despising this truth, you abandon me to my fate in a sea of troubles. What now must poor humanity do? Where can its faith be placed? Did you not yourself bid me give my heart to you, ingrate, inveigling me into Love's perilous land by promises of perfect security?

Now, in spite of the past, you fall back, and suffer wind and rack to sweep into nothingness all that you have said and done ! Mark ! tho' you have forgotten, the gods remember, Honour remembers, and one day she shall overwhelm you with remorse for your crime.'

Catullus was happier in his friendship with Licinius Calvus. Calvus was a poet, and the two friends are always mentioned together. Had he lived longer—we have the testimony of Cicero as well as of Quintilian—he would have become one of the greatest of the world's orators. The extraordinary vehemence of his style is illustrated by the story according to which Vatinius, whose several prosecutions were conducted by Calvus, on one occasion sprang from his seat and appealed to the judges, exclaiming—"Am I to be damned just because that man has an eloquent tongue?" The effect of this passionate oratory was heightened by the small stature and childish appearance of the man, as we learn from a few hendecasyllables of Catullus :—

'A fellow in the crowd made me laugh the other day, when Calvus had completed his magnificent impeachment of Vatinius: for, lifting both hands in amazement, "Great Gods !" cried he, "little Cupid is an orator."'

Calvus must have exercised a great influence on the poetical culture of his friend ; we find the two in the habit of writing against one another in friendly rivalry and raillery. A wicked Christmas present from Calvus evoked these verses :—

'Calvus, you prince of wits, I would hate you, for your wicked present, with all the spleen of Vatinius—if you were not more precious in my sight than my own eyes. What have I done or said to justify you in cruelly poisoning me with such a dose of poets? May the gods visit with a thousand plagues the vile client of yours who has sent you this horde of outcasts! But if (as I shrewdly guess) this original and exquisite offering was made you by the pedant Sulla, I do not murmur, but thank the stars that you have not thrown your pains away. I hold up in the sight of the great gods this portentous and predestinate volume, which you sent of all men to your friend Catullus, designing that he should die on the morrow, on the Saturnalia, the brightest day of the year! But no, jester! this act must bring you its consequences: for, at the first streak of day, I will fly to the publisher's shelves, make a packet of Caesii, Aquini, Suffenus—every literary drug—and send these tortures to pay you in kind.

You—in the meantime—hence and God speed ye, away to the regions from which you made your base egress, curse of our times, most vile poetasters!’

A much sadder theme, the early death of Calvus' young wife, Quintilia, called from his friend an expression of most tender sympathy and delicate consolation:—

‘Dear Calvus, if any pleasure or any satisfaction can steal into the silent tomb out of our sense of loss, when with tender memory we recast our old passions and weep for the friendships we bade adieu to long ago, then surely Quintilia's sorrow for her summer fading cannot compare with her joy in the knowledge of your love.’

The aversions of Catullus were as strong as his attachments, and suffered no diminution of vivacity and no loss of colour when reflected in the mirror of his verse. Invective is now to be numbered among the lost arts ; and perhaps can only enjoy true vitality in a synthetic language. Even among the ancients but few grand masters of this art arose, separated by wide intervals of time and place. The last truly gifted artist in opprobrium, if we may believe a profound critic,¹ was Catullus. Some of his most vigorous productions affect our altered taste with no pleasure or admiration. Aurelius, the 'father of Inanition,' Mamurra, whose gluttony would have swallowed the British Isles at a meal, Furius, too miserly to board a flea or a spider, are pilloried with indignities peculiar to the older world.² But we can sympathize with an indignation that stigmatizes the practical joke, when wit is conspicuous by its absence. The fop, too, who, because nature had decorated him with a white set of teeth, grinned on every occasion down to a funeral, received an appropriate castigation. The absolute stupidity of the Veronese boor, incapable of appreciating the treasure he possessed in his beautiful young wife, would have justly provoked his townsmen to pitch him headlong from the bridge into the bluest of the mire. The terrible atrocities committed on a helpless language by the mutilation of aspirates is still unrepressed, and everybody knows the modern replica of 'Arrius.' But the most awful seals of Catullus' wrath are opened against the bad poets, with whom all times abound. The direst curses are invoked by him, or hecatombs are vowed, in the shape of execrable poems ; and they are relentlessly doomed to the death by fire or fish, or to fates still more horrible.

Chivalry was a flame that never burned in classic Greece or classic Rome. Its first spark was struck when the spirit of Christianity met the northern spirit in the west. Chivalrous love was a world into which not even our passionate poet ever broke, although there were times when he hovered on the verge. Deep personal affection he knew, for that was his ruin. Self-abnegation was the motive of the old Roman constitution. But affection was still sensuous, and devotion confined to patriotism, in ancient feeling. No brighter picture of the former exists than the 'Acme and Septimius' of Catullus, which by itself (and, indeed, his love-poems are but few) would place him in the front rank of the 'poets of love.' The greatest of English scholars has said, 'I look on Catullus as the peer of Alcaeus and Sappho' and bids us, to find his match in after-times, 'jump over the ages and come at once to Burns and Goethe.' Again he affirms, 'No love poems yet written are so exquisite, to my mind.' We may also borrow here the fine words of his criticism of the 'Acme and Septimius': 'Note the perfect unity and harmony of the thought, the magnificent motion of the rhythm. . . . Here again we have the ring of true passion. At the moment when the poem was written Caesar was invading Britain, and Crassus was off "partant pour la Syrie," to annihilate the Parthians. The youth of Rome were flocking east and west, some to share in the conquest and pillage of the new America; others to seek the gold and jewels of Asia. Septimius heeds it not. What is gain and glory to him, when Acme is on his bosom? The whole of this exquisite poem well illustrates the fine observation of Hermogenes: ἡ δὲ γλυκύτης οἶον κάλλος τι τῆς ἀφελείας ἐστί.' Whenever Catullus speaks of love, there is nothing artificial, nothing strained in the tones; no skilled analysis of emotion, no introduction of intellectual afterthoughts; nothing but the simple and natural expression of strong excitement, nothing but what is becoming in one, like himself, who 'loved not wisely, but too well.'

In his own history there is no doubt that he lavished on Lesbia a love painfully out of proportion to the worth of its object. The praises of other women he heard with scornful incredulity, wondering at the obtuseness of the world. The restitution of his mistress' smile left him without a desire. The death of her linnet was a grave calamity and a theme of pretty pathetic verse to him, as it would have been to a romantic poet. In herself and in all that belonged to her she was dearer to him than his own eyes. He must certainly have sacrificed the use of his eyes in her presence, when he could believe that in her presence alone the medicine of life was to be found.

The most remarkable effect of Catullus' passion was shown in its transforming, transmuting power: its potent fire purged sin of sinfulness, and turned baseness into benevolence, and changed an adulteress to a goddess. But when he fell from favour he made no stay at the intermediate fields of sighing now set apart for unhappy lovers : he leaped from heaven to hell, from love to hate. When he finally woke from the deception, he confronted the reality. He knew the delusion was of his own creation ; and his detestation of the cause was almost mixed with wonder at its power. But he cannot forgive Clodia ; much less Rufus, the author of his destruction. He persecutes both with a venom and brutality of purpose only explicable on the principle that the corruption of the best thing is the worst.

Yet in spite of the blight which thus fell upon the life of Catullus, there were some feelings which still remained fresh and healthy. His tender attentions to his friends and to his brother's memory still remained in leaf. The brother died at an early age, and was buried in the Troad — 'that neutral graveyard of Europe and Asia.' Catullus made a pilgrimage to the tomb, where all that made his life worth living was laid, and his words then spoken will make a fitting conclusion :—

'Dear brother, I have passed through many peoples, I have crossed many seas, and I am here, at these untimely obsequies, that I may deliver to thee death's last tribute, and waste fruitless words on dust that cannot answer. For I know that blind chance has stolen away from me thy living self, O my poor brother, so loved and yet lost by me ! Behold ! these despairing sacrifices, which old custom on this soil enjoins, take, I pray thee—they are made wet with a brother's tears. And thus I greet thee and bid thee farewell, brother, for evermore.'

III.

‘Quid est, Catulle? quid moraris emori?’

THE secret of immortality can be learned more easily from Catullus than from any one, for he possessed nothing beside. To express a conceived object of sense or form of emotion in some plastic material which can be made to present an image, such as stone, metal or pigment, or words, which are images of images, with the simplicity of truth and the grace always accompanying true simplicity, is the conclusion of the whole duty of art. Of making many additions to this duty, some more and some less incongruous, but all supererogatory and laborious, there is no end among artists of every kind. But Catullus stands clear of this imputation. His experience of a passion or a conception is direct, spontaneous, and so free from superfluous pains and any appearance of effort. He reproduced with precision what he saw and felt with an unconfused sensibility; and was successful because he did not strain to do more. The peculiar merit of his poetry consists in what we might call incuriosa felicitas. If he is one of the most perfect of poets, why then is he not one of the greatest of poets? Because, when the power of execution is assumed, rank and precedence among artists is determined by the comparative elevation of their subject-matter. By what standard the world has pronounced some subjects to be of a 'higher' kind than others is a question we may leave to the moral philosopher. The world is an autocratic judge, and dictates the verdict that Catullus' subjects are not of the highest sublimity. But whatever title we give him must be perpetual, for his works have the immortality of truth.

QUAESTIO I.

CATULLUS IN RELATION TO GREEK LITERATURE.

*'Saepe tibi studiose animo venante requirens
Carmina uti possem mittere Battiadae.'*

IF the web of history could be unravelled, and we might speculate afresh on what is past, nothing would appear so certain as this: that Rome, but for her contact with Greece, instead of producing a literature whose influence has pervaded and ruled the later world of letters with almost sovereign authority, would have had no literature whatsoever worthy of the name. Whatever native inspiration the Italians possessed, they wanted the proper forms of expression. Greek genius had created these forms for itself: the Roman borrowed them, and used them, in his own way, to supply his need. Roman poetry is far from a lifeless imitation of Greek poetry; but the Roman poet could not work without a model. At first wrong models were chosen. The earlier and greater Greek literature rather defied than assisted Latin literary effort. It was too spontaneous for conscious endeavour.

to learn from it; its Hellenic characters were too deeply stamped to be effaced or changed in order to suit Roman purposes. As long therefore as only the earlier Greek epic and drama were studied by the first Latin poets, so long—men of genius though they were—they failed. But the last generation of the Republic turned for instruction to the school of Alexandria. There, by royal command, a cosmopolitan university of letters had arisen, whose members had specially devoted themselves to the critical examination of the modes of literary composition, and had provided a series of 'studies' in almost every literary form. Alexandrine poetry was not written by men of the highest order of genius: it was artificial, unreal, often spoilt by over-precision and pedantry. Its power, though indeed it has left much which the world will not willingly let die, lies in execution rather than creation. But the Roman poets seized the forms which the Alexandrines taught them, made them their own, and breathed into them the freshness of a newer life. More than this, they were enabled by Alexandria to reach and reap with profit the older literature of Greece. Thus Roman literature, in its best originality, became possible; but the debt of Rome to Alexandria is ever shown by a constant searching after the right model, discernible in all Latin poetry from its beginning to its close.

This debt was freely confessed by Propertius, Ovid, Virgil; but by none so frankly as by the most original of Roman poets, Catullus. He had learned enough from the Alexandrine poets to respect them as masters of style. How much he depended on them for guidance (far greater poet as he was than they) is curiously illustrated by the lines (CXVI. 1-2) prefixed to these remarks. There, wishing to find a means of winning over Gellius and appeasing his hostility, he does not send him a poem written from his own heart and appealing to the heart of his enemy, but tries to find poems of Callimachus (for translation or imitation) that will serve the same end. In LXV., also, he seems to imply that he does not care to compose without his books.

But Catullus is no mere disciple of Alexandria. He is a student also of the grand classical writers of Greece, and rises nearer to their elevation than any Alexandrine had done. Still further, throughout all his employment of acquired culture, he is a great original poet.

¹ 'In what then, we may ask, is Catullus a follower of the Alexandrine poets? Not in their pedantry, for he is without a trace of it; nor in their obscurity, for he is rarely obscure; nor in their scrupulous choice of the least obvious expression, for all he says is simple and straightforward, . . . nor in their cosmopolitan Hellenism which has ceased to think of individual autonomy and cares only to influence the world, for he can never forget that he is an Italian, a Veronese, above all a Roman citizen; nor in their flattery of the great, for he is never happier than when he is scoffing at worthless nobles or reviling Caesar: nor even in the tone of their love poetry, for, with some unimportant exceptions, he expresses not a Theocritean sentimentalism, which feeds on the thought of a beloved object, and half contents itself with the shadow when the reality is away; but rather a full feeling of the enjoyment of life, the sensuous even coarse delights of a love present and palpable, the melancholy which attends the thought of death as ending them, and the various episodes of a lover's life, its quarrels, reproaches, and reconciliation, or despair. So far as these love-poems are Greek at all, they are like the early Greek lyrics, not the latest compositions of Alexandria; and we are left to the conclusion that Catullus is, except in the elegies, and to some extent in the "Peleus and Thetis," less indebted to Alexandrine models than is generally supposed: amongst his personal friends Cinna, in the succeeding generation, Virgil and Propertius, show far clearer proofs of direct and conscious imitation.'

We do not know how much Catullus modelled upon originals now lost; but parallelisms—which do not seem accidental—between him and extant Alexandrine writers (A), and between Catullus and the older Greek writers (B), are shown in the following tables.

On all these passages it is to be remarked, in the words of Ellis, 'that Catullus, even when he translates most literally, transfuses his own nature into the words, and remains as Italian as before.'

QUAESTIO II.

CATULLUS' POSITION IN LATIN LITERATURE.

'Lepidum novum libellum.'

EARLIER Roman poetry, as we have seen, failed for the most part for lack of form. It was also confined in subject, and attempted only the epos, the drama, satire, and (in a limited sense) the epigram. In the age of Catullus, better directed study resulted in a truer and larger sense of the various forms of literary composition; and the lyric, the idyll, and the elegy were added to Roman literature. This new birth of Latin poetry is represented to us by Catullus alone. The works of all the other writers of his time have been lost; and the same irony of fate, which gave us Hesiod in place of Archilochus and the Greek lyrists, has preserved Cicero's translation of Aratus, instead of the works of Bibaculus and Calvus. Catullus was, however, as far as we can learn, far greater than the rest of his contemporaries; and should be regarded, therefore, as the first in time, as well as in genius, of Roman lyric, elegiac, idyllic, and epigrammatic poets.

That he should have shown much literary resemblance to the more ancient Roman verse-writers is, therefore, as unlikely in itself as it is disproved by his writings. But he shared their native boldness and independence of spirit; and his wide reading did not leave him ignorant of what they had done. With LXIV. 163 compare PACUVIUS' Niptra; with LXIV. 191 compare PACUVIUS Il. fr. ix.; with LXIV. 291 compare Ennius, quoted by Gellius, N. A. XIII. XX. 13.

With PLAUTUS and TERENCE Catullus had more in common. Like them (but without their archaic colour) he employed the idiom of ordinary life, which, with but little change, he elevated into the language of poetry. Parallelisms are—

LUCRETIVUS, between whom and Catullus there are parallelisms which cannot have been accidental, died less than a year before the younger poet, and his poem

“could not have been published in the author’s lifetime” (Munro). Yet Munro affirms that Catullus imitated Lucretius. Before this view can be accepted we must believe that in the course of a few months, and during the illness which proved fatal to Catullus (unless he died a violent death, for which there is no evidence), he studied Lucretius’ great philosophical work throughout—for the parallelisms are found in every book of that work—and then wrote his longest and most elaborated poem¹, the ‘Peleus and Thetis,’ if not also xxxiv. and (this would be incredible) lxi. Munro admits that the philosopher Cicero himself could not have read the “De Natura” four months after the death of Lucretius, if he had not ‘had anything to do with preparing it for publication.’ Catullus, too, shows no taste for philosophy, no liking for the more archaic Roman poetry. Still further, there is no reason to think that he wrote his idyll last of all his writings; it was quite as probably one of his earliest creations. Munro himself admits that ‘many of Catullus’ occasional poems on the other hand had in all likelihood been seen by Lucretius.’ Most probably, then, Catullus never read Lucretius; who, it must also be remarked, if he imitated Catullus at all, would be most likely to confine himself chiefly to the hexameter poem. The parallelisms are given below:—

The relative position of HORACE and Catullus in Latin lyrical poetry has, in recent discussions, been made one of rivalry for the first place. That Horace was strongly adverse to the Alexandrine school, of which no imitative trace is found in him, cannot be doubted. But (Epist. I. i.) it is equally certain that he was at least as strongly adverse to the earlier and untutored Latin poetry. In his literary criticisms and in his odes he omitted to mention Catullus with honour as a lyric poet, partly because Catullus was a Republican, partly because the elder poet wrote mostly in metres unused by the Augustan; chiefly because Horace devoted himself specially to imitation of the older Greek lyrics. Catullus, however, was of infinitely higher lyrical genius than Horace, and this is shown in the conscious imitations by the latter exhibited in the following table.

¹ It is, however, curious that Horace, the anti-Alexandrine, was more Alexandrine in his artificial, unreal and elaborate lyrics than Catullus, the student of Alexandria. See Munro 'Elucidations of C.' ad fin., for a comparative criticism of the two poets.

Imitations of Catullus in the VIRGILIAN CATALECTA and in MARTIAL are incessant, and are too numerous to admit or require statement in this place. Outlines of poems, ideas, phrases, and words are borrowed freely and constantly from Catullus, whom the authors seem wisely to regard as the first Latin poet who struck out the true lines in which Latin poetry might run with success.

UNIVERSITY OF LIFE.

CAIUS VALERIUS CATULLUS was born at Verona (87 or 84 B.C.), of a good family. We hear of his father as the friend and frequently the host of Julius Caesar. The poet came to Rome as soon as he became his own master, and there made his settled home. There he had the society of Calvus, Cinna, Cornificius, young Asinius Pollio, Alfenus Varus, Caelius Rufus, and, perhaps, Cicero; and there he fell into the toils of Clodia, the wife of the consul Metellus Celer, and the Lesbia of the poems. We hear of visits to his villa at Tibur, to another villa at Sirmio, and also to Verona. The pleasures of the town seem to have kept him always poor; and he followed the praetor Memmius to Bithynia, which had newly become a Roman province, in the vain hope of mending his fortunes (57 B.C.). On his homeward journey he went to see his brother's grave in the Troad, passed through the famous cities of Asia, and returned in his yacht to Sirmio (56 B.C.). This retreat he left for Rome, where he seems to have spent the remainder of his short life. We know that he died young, perhaps (as is said) at the age of thirty; and, as his poems contain no certain allusion to events of later date than 54 B.C., we may believe that to have been the year of his death.

ADVERTISEMENT TO TEXT.

THE Gothic malice of mice and men has played havoc with the manuscripts of Catullus. No MS. containing any of his works now exists of earlier date than the Thuanean (in the Paris Library), considered to have been written about 900 A.D., which is an anthology of Latin poems, but of Catullus includes only LXII. About fifty years later the French monk Rather, Bishop of Verona, speaks of having read our poet for the first time. Soon after 1300 A.D. a MS. of Catullus was brought to Verona, discovered, apparently, in some distant place, hidden under a bushel-measure:—

Versus domini Benevuti de Campexanis de Vicentia de resurrectione Catulli, poetae Veronensis :

Ad patriam venio longis de finibus exul :

Causa mei reditus compatriota fuit,

Scilicet a calamis tribuit cui Francia nomen

Quique notat turbae praetereuntis iter.

Quo licet ingenio vestrum celebrate Catullum,

Cujus sub modio clausa papyrus erat.

These verses are found in the MS. called Sangermanensis (now in the Paris Library), written 1375 A.D.; which the writer says he copied 'a corruptissimo ex-emplari,' (his original being perhaps the Veronese MS. above mentioned, which, unfortunately, was soon lost again), that being the only MS. extant to which he could have access. The only other MS. which may be ascribed to the fourteenth century is one in the Bodleian Library, Oxford (generally known as O). Although these are our best authorities, yet both contain variae lectiones, and are often wrong. Some dozen other MSS. date from 1411 to 1463 A.D.—the first printed edition was published 1472 A.D.—but all are obscured by corrections, interpolated, and full of errors. There are many, still less valuable, of later date.

Even the agreement of all Catullus' best MSS. is not enough to establish a doubtful reading. Many necessary corrections were made by the early Italian scholars, and much too has been done by scholars of the present century, whose attentions have at least atoned for the neglect of the previous hundred years. Many passages still admit conjecture, which, however, in recent editions has been perhaps too largely employed. The old maxim, indeed, that an emendation 'must account for every letter,' cannot fairly be applied in the present state of our manuscript evidence; and perhaps the ipsisima verba of Catullus are in some cases very different from the mutilated presentations of the extant codices. But it would be inadvisable to admit into a text even attractive readings which differ widely from those of our best, if still inadequate, authorities. The following text will be found to adhere (except in undoubted corrections) to the best MSS.; which have been made accessible by recent and most valuable apparatus critici, especially that of ELLIS.

In spelling, all peculiarities have been avoided. These occur largely in the extant MSS., and some of them may have been derived from early MSS., but the probability is infinitely remote that they are Catullian. For the purposes of the present edition, their retention would be worse than useless.

CATULLUS.

I.

Cui dono lepidum novum libellum
Arido modo pumice expolitum? olind. lat.
Corneli, tibi: namque tu solebas
Meas esse aliquid putare nugas,
Jam tum cum ausus es unus Italorum 5
Omne aevum tribus explicare cartis
Doctis, Juppiter, et laboriosis.
Quare habe tibi quicquid hoc libelli:
Qualecumque quidem, patrona virgo,
Plus uno maneat perenne saeclo. 10

II.

Passer, deliciae meae puellae,
Quicum ludere, quem in sinu tenere,
Cui primum digitum dare adpetenti
Et acres solet incitare morsus,
Cum desiderio meo nitenti 5
Carum nescio quid libet jocari
Et solaciolum sui doloris.
Credo: ut, cum gravis acquiescet ardor,
S A

Tecum ludere sicut ipsa possem
 Et tristes animi levare curas. 10
 Tam gratum est mihi quam ferunt puellae
 Pernici aureolum fuisse malum,
 Quod zonam soluit diu ligatam.

III.

Lugete, o Veneres Cupidinesque
 Et quantum est hominum venustiorum.
 Passer mortuus est meae puellae,
 Passer, deliciae meae puellae,
 Quem plus illa oculis suis amabat: 5
 Nam mellitus erat suamque norat
 Ipsam tam bene quam puella matrem,
 Nec sese a gremio illius movebat,
 Sed circumsiliens modo huc modo illuc
 Ad solam dominam usque pipilabat. 10
 Qui nunc it per iter tenebriosum
 Illuc, unde negant redire quemquam.
 At vobis male sit, malae tenebrae
 Orci, quae omnia bella devoratis:
 Tam bellum mihi passerem abstulistis. 15
 O factum male, io miselle passer,
 Tua nunc opera meae puellae
 Flendo turgiduli rubent ocelli.

IV.

Phaselus ille, quem videtis, hospites,
 Ait fuisse navium celerrimus,

Neque ullius natantis impetum trabis
 Nequisset praeterire, sive palmulis
 Opus foret volare sive linteo. 5
 Et hoc negat minacis Adriatici
 Negare litus insulasve Cycladas
 Rhodumque nobilem horridamque Thraciam
 Propontida, trucemve Ponticum sinum,
 Ubi iste post phaselus antea fuit 10
 Comata silva: nam Cytorio in jugo
 Loquente saepe sibilum edidit coma.
 Amastri Pontica et Cytore buxifer
 Tibi haec fuisse et esse cognitissima
 Ait phaselus: ultima ex origine 15
 Tuo stetisse dicit in cacumine,
 Tuo imbuisse palmulas in aequore,
 Et inde tot per impotentia freta
 Erum tulisse, laeva sive dextera
 Vocaret aura, sive utrumque Juppiter 20
 Simul secundus incidisset in pedem;
 Neque ulla vota litoralibus deis
 Sibi esse facta, cum veniret a mari
 Novissime hunc ad usque limpidum lacum.
 Sed haec prius fuere: nunc recondita 25
 Senet quiete seque dedicat tibi
 Gemelle Castor et gemelle Castoris.

V.

Vivamus mea Lesbia atque amemus,
 Rumoresque senum severiorum
 Omnes unius aestimemus assis.

Soles occidere et redire possunt :
 Nobis, cum semel occidit brevis lux, 5
 Nox est perpetua una dormienda.
 Da mi basia mille, deinde centum,
 Dein mille altera, dein secunda centum,
 Deinde usque altera mille, deinde centum.
 Dein, cum milia multa fecerimus, 10
 Conturbabimus illa, ne sciamus,
 Aut ne quis malus invidere possit, enry
 Cum tantum sciat esse basiorum.

VII.

Quaeris, quot mihi basiationes
 Tuae, Lesbia, sint satis superque.
 Quam magnus numerus Libyssae arenae
 Laserpiciferis jacet Cyrenis,
 Oraclum Jovis inter aestuosi 5
 Et Batti veteris sacrum sepulcrum ;
 Aut quam sidera multa, cum tacet nox,
 Furtivos hominum vident amores :
 Tam te basia multa basiare
 Vesano satis et super Catullo est, 10
 Quae nec pernumerare curiosi
 Possint, nec mala fascinare lingua.

IX.

Veranni, omnibus e meis amicis
 Antistans mihi milibus trecentis,
 Venistine domum ad tuos Penates
 Fratresque unanimos anumque matrem ?

Venisti. O mihi nuntii beati. 5
 Visam te incolumem audiamque Hiberum
 Narrantem loca, facta, nationes,
 Ut mos est tuus; applicansque collum
 Jucundum os oculosque suaviabor.
 O quantum est hominum beatiorum, 10
 Quid me laetius est beatiusve?

✓ Varus me meus ad suos amores
 Visum duxerat e foro otiosum,
 Scortillum, ut mihi tum repente visum est,
 Non sane illepidum neque invenustum.
 Huc ut venimus, incidere nobis 5
 Sermones varii, in quibus, quid esset
 Jam Bithynia, quomodo se haberet,
 Et quonam mihi profuisset aere.
 Respondi, id quod erat, nihil nec ipsis
 Nec praetoribus esse nec cohorti 10
 Cur quisquam caput unctius referret, Praesertim quibus esset irrumator
 Praetor nec faceret pili cohortem. 5
 'At certe tamen,' inquiunt, 'quod illic
 Natum dicitur esse, comparasti 15
 Ad lecticam homines.' Ego, ut puellae
 Unum me facerem beatiorem,
 'Non,' inquam, 'mihi tam fuit maligne,
 Ut, provincia quod mala incidisset,
 Non possem octo homines parare rectos.' 20
 At mi nullus erat neque hic neque illic

Pauca nuntiate meae puellae 15

Non bona dicta :

Cum suis vivat valeatque moechis,
Quos simul complexa tenet trecentos,
Nullum amans vere, sed identidem omnium

Ilia rumpens. 20

Nec meum respectet, ut ante, amorem,
Qui illius culpa cecidit velut prati
Ultimi flos, praetereunte postquam
Tactus aratro est.

XII. Catullus

Marrucine Asini, manu sinistra
Non belle uteris in joco atque vino :
Tollis lintea negligentiorum.

Hoc salsum esse putas? Fugit te, inepte :
Quamvis sordida res et invenusta est. 5

Non credis mihi? Crede Pollioni

Fratri, qui tua furta vel talento

Mutari velit: est enim leporum

Disertus puer ac facetiarum.

Quare aut hendecasyllabos trecentos 10

Expecta, aut mihi lintheum remitte,

Quod me non movet aestimatione,

Verum est mnemosynum mei sodalis.

Nam sudaria Saetaba ex Hiberna

Miserunt mihi muneri Fabullus 15

Et Verannius: haec amem necesse est

Et Veranniolum meum et Fabullum.

XIII.

Cenabis bene, mi Fabulle, apud me
Paucis, si tibi dii favent, diebus,
Si tecum attuleris bonam atque magnam
Cenam, non sine candida puella
Et vino et sale et omnibus cachinnis. 5
Haec si, inquam, attuleris, venuste noster,
Cenabis bene: nam tui Catulli
Plenus sacculus est aranearum.
Sed contra accipies meros amores
Seu quid suavius elegantiusve est. 10
Nam unguentum dabo, quod meae puellae
Donarunt Veneres Cupidinesque,
Quod tu cum olfacies, deos rogabis
Totum ut te faciant, Fabulle, nasum.

XIV.

Ni te plus oculis meis amarem,
Jucundissime Calve, munere isto
Odissem te odio Vatiniano.
Nam quid feci ego quidve sum locutus
Cur me tot male perderes poetis? 5
Isti dii mala multa dent clienti
Qui tantum tibi misit impiorum.
Quod si, ut suspicor, hoc novum ac repertum
Munus dat tibi Sulla litterator,
Non est mi male sed bene ac beate, 10
Quod non dispereunt tui labores.
Dii magni, horribilem et sacrum libellum,

Quem tu scilicet ad tuum Catullum
 Misti, continuo ut die periret,
 Saturnalibus, optimo dierum. 15
 Non, non hoc tibi, salse, sic abibit:
 Nam, si luxerit, ad librariorum
 Curram scrinia; Caesios, Aquinos,
 Suffenum, omnia colligam venena,
 Ac te his suppliciis remunerabor. 20
 Vos hinc interea (valete) abite
 Illuc unde malum pedem attulistis,
 Sæcli incommoda, pessimi poetæ.

XVII.

O Colonia, quae cupis ponte ludere magno,
 Et salire paratum habes, sed vereris inepta
 Crura ponticuli axulis stantis in redivivis,
 Ne supinus eat cavaque in palude recumbat,
 Sic tibi bonus ex tua pons libidine fiat, 5
 In quo vel Salisubsali sacra suscipiantur:
 Munus hoc mihi maximi da, Colonia, risus.
 Quemdam municipem meum de tuo volo ponte
 Ire praecipitem in lutum per caputque pedesque,
 Verum totius ut lacus putidaequē paludis 10
 Lividissima maximeque est profunda vorago.
 Insulsissimus est homo, nec sapit pueri instar
 Bimuli tremula patris dormientis in ulna;
 Cui cum sit viridissima nupta flore puella,
 (Et puella tenellulo delicatior hædo, 15 Asservanda nigerrimis diligentius uvis)
 Ludere hanc sinit ut libet, nec pili facit uni,

Nec se sublevat ex sua parte, sed velut alnus
 In fossa Liguri jacet supernata securi, Tantundem omnia sentiens quam si nulla sit usquam. 20

Talis iste meus stupor nil videt, nihil audit,
 Ipse qui sit, utrum sit an non sit, id quoque nescit.

Nunc eum volo de tuo ponte mittere pronum.
 Si pote stolidum repente excitare veternum,
 Et ^{supinum} supinum animum in gravi derelinquere
 caeno, 25

Ferream ut soleam tenaci in voragine mula:

XXII.

Suffenus iste, Vare, quem probe nosti,
 Homo est venustus et dicax et urbanus,
 Idemque longe plurimos facit versus.
 Puto esse ego illi milia aut decem aut plura
 Perscripta, nec, sicut fit, in palimpsesto 5
 Relata: cartae regiae, novi libri,
 Novi umbilici, lora rubra, membranae,
 Directa plumbo et pumice omnia aequata.
 Haec cum legas tu, bellus ille et urbanus
 Suffenus unus caprimulgus aut fossor 10
 Rursus videtur: tantum abhorret ac mutat.
 Hoc quid putemus esse? qui modō scurra,
 Aut si quid hac re tritius, videbatur,
 Idem infaceto est infacetior rure
 Simul poemata attigit, neque idem unquam 15
 Aequae est beatus ac poema cum scribit:

before (55)

Tam gaudet in se tamque se ipse miratur.
 Nimirum idem omnes fallimur, neque est quisquam
 Quem non in aliqua re videre Suffenum
 Possis. Suus cuique attributus est error : 20
 Sed non videmus manticae quod in tergo est.

XXV.

24

Cinaede Thalle, mollior cuniculi capillo
 Vel anseris medullula vel imula auricilla
 Vel pene languido senis situque araneoso,
 Idemque, Thalle, turbida rapacior procella,
 Cum diva mulier aries ostendit oscitantes, 5
 Remitte pallium mihi meum, quod involasti
 Sudariumque Saetabum catagraphosque Thynos,
 Inepte, quae palam soles habere tanquam avita.
 Quae nunc tuis ab unguibus reglutina et remitte,
 Ne laneum latusculum manusque mollicellas 10
 Inusta turpiter tibi flagella conscribillent,
 Et insolenter aestues velut minuta magno
 Deprensa navis in mari, vesaniente vento.

XXVI.

Furi, villula nostra non ad Austri
 Flatus opposita est neque ad Favoni
 Nec saevi Boreae aut Apheliotae, 5
 Verum ad milia quindecim et ducentos.
 O ventum horribilem atque pestilentem. 5

XXVII.

Minister vetuli puer Falerni,
 Inger mi calices amariores,

Ut lex Postumiae jubet magistræ
Ebrioso acino ebriosioris.

At vos, quod jubet, hinc abite, lymphæ, 5
Vini perniciēs, et ad severos
Migrate. Hic merus est Thyonianus.

XXX.

Alfene immemor atque unanimis false sodalibus,
Jam te nil miseret, dure, tui dulcis amiculi?
Jam me prodere, jam non dubitas fallere, perfide?
Nec facta impia fallacum hominum caelicolis placcent.

Quæ tu negligis ac me miserum deseris in malis. 5
Eheu quid faciant, dic, homines, cuive habeant fi-dem?

Certo tute jubebas animum tradere, inique, me
Inducens in amorem, quasi tuta omnia mi forent.
Idem nunc retrahis te ac tua dicta omnia factaque

Ventos irrita ferre ac nebulas aereas sinis. 10
Si tu oblitus es, at dii meminerunt, meminit Fides, Quæ tu ut poeniteat postmodo facti faciet tui.

XXXI.

Paene insularum, Sirmio, insularumque
Ocelle, quascunque in liquentibus stagnis
Marique vasto fert uterque Neptunus,
Quam te libenter quamque laetus invisio,
Vix mi ipse credens Thyniam atque Bithynos 5
Liquisse campos et videre te in tuto.

O quid solutis est beatius curis,
 Cum mens onus reponit ac peregrino
 Labore fessi venimus larem ad nostrum
 Desideratoque acquiescimus lecto? 10
 Hoc est quod unum est pro laboribus tantis.
 Salve, o venusta Sirmio, atque hero gaude,
 Gaudete vosque, o Lydiae lacus undae;
 Ridete quicquid est domi cachinnorum.

XXXIV.

Dianæ sumus in fidē
 Puellæ et pueri intēgri:
 Dianam pueri intēgri
 Puellæque canamus.
 O Latonia, maximi 5
 Magnā prōgēnēs Jovis,
 Quam mātēr prōpē Deliam
 Depōsivīt olivām,
 Montium domina ut fores
 Silvarumque virentium 10
 Saltuumque reconditorum
 Anniumque sonantum.
 Tu Lucina dolentibus
 Juno dicta puerperis,
 Tu potens Trivia et notho es 15
 Dicta lumine Luna.
 Tu cursu, dea, menstruo
 Metiens iter annuum,
 Rustica agricolae bonis
 Tecta frugibus exples. 20

Sis quocunque tibi placet
 Sancta nomine, Romulique,
 Antique ut solita es, bona Sospites ope gentem.

XXXV.

Poetae tenero, meo sodali,
 Velim Caecilio, papyre, dicas
 Veronam veniat, Novi relinquens
 Comi moenia Lariumque litus ;
 Nam quasdam volo cogitationes 5
 Amici accipiat sui meique.
 Quare si sapiet viam vorabit,
 Quamvis candida milies puella
 Euntem revocet, manusque collo
 Ambas injiciens roget morari, 10
 Quae nunc, si mihi vera nuntiantur,
 Illum deperit impotente amore.
 Nam quo tempore legit incohata
 Dindymi dominam, ex eo misellae
 Ignes interiorum edunt medullam. 15
 Ignosco tibi, Sapphica puella
 Musa doctior : est enim venuste
 Magna Caecilio incohata mater.

XXXVI.

Annales Volusi, cacata carta,
 Votum solvite pro mea puella.
 Nam sanctae Veneri Cupidinesque
 Vovit, si sibi restitutus essem

Desissemque truces vibrare iambos, 5
 Electissima pessimi poetae
 Scripta tardipedi deo daturam
 Infelicibus ustulanda lignis ;
 Et hoc pessima se puella vidit
 Jocose lepide vovere divis. 10
 Nunc o caeruleo creata ponto,
 Quae sanctum Idalium Uriosque apertos,
 Quaeque Ancona Cnidumque arundinosam
 Colis, quaeque Amathunta, quaeque Golgos,
 Quaeque Durrachium Adriae tabernam, 15
 Acceptum face redditumque votum,
 Si non illepidum neque invenustum est.
 At vos interea venite in ignem,
 Pleni ruris et inficetiarum
 Annales Volusi, cacata carta. 20

XXXVIII.

Male est, Cornifici, tuo Catullo,
 Male est, me hercule, et laboriose,
 Et magis magis in dies et horas.
 Quem tu, quod minimum facillimumque est,
 Qua solatus es allocutione? 5
 Irascor tibi. Sic meos amores?
 Paulum quid libet allocutionis,
 Maestius lacrimis Simonideis.

XXXIX.

Egnatius, quod candidos habet dentes,
 Renidet usque quaque : si ad rei ventum est

Subsellium, cum orator excitat fletum,
 Renidet ille : si ad pii ^{honorat} rogum fili
 Lugetur, orba ^{ead} cum flet unicum mater, 5
 Renidet ille : quicquid est, ubicunque est,
 Quodcunque agit, renidet: hunc habet morbum,
 Neque elegantem ut arbitror neque urbanum.
 Quare monendum te est mihi, bone Egnati :
 Si urbanus esses aut Sabinus aut Tiburs, 10
 Aut ^{hic videtur} parcus UMBER aut ^{stans} obesus Etruscus, Aut Lanuvinus ater atque dentatus,
 Aut Transpadanus, ut meos quocque attingam,
 Aut quilibet, qui puriter lavit dentes,
 Tamen renidere usque quaque te nollem, 15
 Nam risu inepto res ineptior nulla est,
 Nunc Celtiber es : Celtiberia in terra,
 Quod quisque minxit, hoc sibi solet mane
 Dentem atque russam defricare gingivam ;
 Ut, quo iste vester expolitior dens est, 20
 Hoc te amplius bibisse praedicet loti.

XL.

Quaenam te mala mens, miselle Ravide,
 Agit praecipitem in meos iambos ?
 Quis deus tibi non bene advocatus ^{habet}
 Vecordem parat excitare rixam ? ^{stultus}
 An ut pervenias in ora vulgi ? 5
 Quid vis ? qualibet esse notus optas ?
 Eris, quandoquidem meos amores
 Cum longa voluisti amare poena.

XLIII. ✓

Salve, nec minimo puella naso,
Nec bello pede nec nigris ocellis
Nec longis digitis nec ore sicco
Nec sane nimis elegante lingua, venit tempus Decoctoris amica Formiani.

Ten' provincia narrat esse bellam?
Tecum Lesbia nostra comparatur?
O saeculum insipiens et infacetum.

XLIV. ✓

O funde noster seu Sabine seu Tiburs—
Nam te esse Tiburtem autumant quibus non est
Cordi Catullum laedere, at quibus cordi est,
Quovis Sabinum pignore esse contendunt—
Sed seu Sabine sive verius Tiburs, 5
Fui libenter in tua suburbana
Villa, malamque pectore expuli tussim,
Non immerenti quam mihi meus venter,
Dum sumptuosas appeto, dedit, coenas.
Nam Sestianus dum volo esse conviva, 10
Orationem in Antium petitozem
Plenam veneni et pestilentiae legi.
Hic me grædo frigida et frequens tussis
Quassavit usque dum in tuum sinum fugi,
Et me recuravi otioque et urtica. 15
Quare reffectus maximas tibi grates
Ago, meum quod non es ulta peccatum.
Nec deprecor jam, si nefaria scripta
Sesti recepso, quin gravedinem et tussim

Non mi, sed ipsi Sestio ferat frigus, 20
 Qui tum vocat me cum malum librum legi.

XLV. ✓

Acmen Septimius, suos amores,
 Tenens in gremio 'mea' inquit 'Acme,
 Ni te perдите amo atque amare porro
 Omnes sum assidue paratus annos
 Quantum qui pote plurimum perire, ut doctus 5
 Solus in Libya Indiaque tosta
 Caesio veniam obvius leoni.'
 Hoc ut dixit, Amor sinistra, ut ante,
 Dextram sternuit approbationem. sternuit
 At Acme leviter caput reflectens 10
 Et dulcis pueri ebrios ocellos
 Illo purpureo ore suaviata,
 'Sic' inquit 'mea vita, Septimille,
 Huic uni domino usque serviamus,
 Ut multa mihi major acriorque 15
 Ignis mollibus ardet in medullis.'
 Hoc ut dixit, Amor sinistra, ut ante
 Dextram sternuit approbationem.
 Nunc ab auspicio bono profecti
 Mutuis animis amant amantur. 20
 Unam Septimius misellus Acmen
 Mavult quam Syrias Britanniasque;
 Uno in Septimio fidelis Acme
 Facit delicias libidinesque. libidines
 Quis ullos homines beatiores 25
 Vidit, quis Venerem auspiciorem?

XLVI.

Jam ver egelidos refert tepores,
 Jam caeli furor aequinoctialis
 Jucundis Zephyri silescit auris.
 Linquantur Phrygii, Catulle, campi
 Nicaeaeque ager uber aestuosae : nicaeae
 Ad claras Asiae volumus urbes.
 Jam mens praetrepidans avet vagari,
 Jam laeti studio pedes vigescunt. laeti studio
 O dulces comitum valete coetus,
 Longe quos simul a domo profectos
 Diversae variae viae reportant.

XLVII.

Porci et Socration, duae sinistrae
 Pisonis, scabies famesque mundi,
 Vos Veranniolo meo et Fabullo
 Verpus praeposuit Priapus ille?
 Vos convivia lauta sumptuose
 De die facitis? mei sodales
 Quaerunt in trivio vocationes?

XLIX.

Disertissime Romuli nepotum
 Quot sunt quotque fuere, Marce Tulli,
 Quotque post aliis erunt in annis,
 Gratias tibi maximas Catullus
 Agit pessimus omnium poeta,
 Tanto pessimus omnium poeta
 Quanto tu optimus omnium patronus.

Hesterno, Licini, die otiosi
 Multum lusimus in meis tabellis,
 Ut convenerat esse delicatos. prose - copy
 Scribens versiculos uterque nostrum
 Ludebat numero modo hoc modo illoc 5
 Reddens mutua per jocum atque vinum.
 Atque illinc abii tuo lepore illiance
 Incensus, Licini, facetiisque, deus
 Ut nec me miserum cibus juvaret
 Nec somnus tegetet quiete ocellos, 10
 Sed toto, indomitus furore, lecto
 Versarer cupiens videre lucem,
 Ut tecum loquerer simulque ut essem.
 At defessa labore membra postquam
 Semimortua lectulo jacebant, 15
 Hoc, jucunde, tibi poema feci,
 Ex quo perspiceres meum dolorem.
 Nunc audax cave sis, precesque nostras,
 Oramus, cave despuas, ocelle,
 Ne poenas Nemesis reponat a te. 20
 Est vemens dea : laedere hanc caveto.

Ille mi par esse deo videtur,
 Ille, si fas est, superare divos,
 Qui sedens adversus identidem te

 Dulce ridentem, misero quod omnes 5

Quid est, Catulle? quid moraris emori?

Sella in curuli Struma Nonius sedet:

Quid est, Catulle? quid moraris emori?

Risi nescio quem modo e corona,

Qui, cum mirifice Vatiniana

Meus crimina Calvus explicasset,

Admirans ait haec manusque tollens,

‘Dii magni, salaputium disertum.’

Concubinus amorem. 130 (123)

Da nuces pueris, iners

Concubine: satis diu

Lusisti nucibus. Libet

Nunc servire Talasio.

Concubine, nuces da. 135 (128)

Sordebant tibi villicae,

Concubine, hodie atque heri. late

Nunc tuum cinerarius

Tondet os. Miser a miser miser miser

Concubine, nuces da. 140 (133)

Diceris male te a tuis,

Unguentate, glabris, marite,

Abstinere, sed abstine.

Io Hymen Hymenaeae io,

Io Hymen Hymenaeae. 145 (138)

Scimus haec tibi quae licent

Sola cognita, sed marito

Ista non eadem licent.

Io Hymen Hymenaeae io,
 Io Hymen Hymenaeae. 150 (143)

Nupta, tu quoque, quae tuus

Vir petet, cave ne neges,

Ni petitum aliunde eat.

Io Hymen Hymenaeae io,

 Io Hymen Hymenaeae. 155 (148)

En tibi domus ut potens

Et beata viri tui.

Quae tibi sine serviat,

Io Hymen Hymenaeae io,

 Io Hymen Hymenaeae, 160 (153)

Usque dum tremulum movens

Cana tempus anilitas

Omnia omnibus annuat.

Io Hymen Hymenaeae io,

 Io Hymen Hymenaeae. 165 (158)

Transfer omine cum bono

Limen aureolos pedes,

Rasilemque subi forem.

Io Hymen Hymenaeae io,

 Io Hymen Hymenaeae. 170 (163)

Aspice unus ut accubans

Vir tuus Tyrio in toro

Totus immineat tibi.

Io Hymen Hymenaeae io,

 Io Hymen Hymenaeae. 175 (168)

Illi non minus ac tibi

Pectore uritur intimo

Flamma, sed penite magis.

- Io Hymen Hymenaeae io,
 Io Hymen Hymenaeae. 180 (173)
 Mitte brachiolum teres,
 Praetextate, puellulae.
 Jam cubile adeant viri.
 Io Hymen Hymenaeae io,
 Io Hymen Hymenaeae. 185 (178)
 Vos, unis senibus bonae
 Cognitae bene feminae,
 Collocate puellulam.
 Io Hymen Hymenaeae io,
 Io Hymen Hymenaeae. 190 (183)
 Jam licet venias, marite:
 Uxor in thalamo tibi est,
 Ore floridulo nitens
 Alba parthenice velut
 Luteumve ^{velum} papaver. 195 (188)
 At, marite, ita me juvent
 Caelites, nihilo minus
 Pulcer es, neque te Venus
 Negligit. Sed abit dies.
 Perge, ne remorare. 200 (193)
 Non diu remoratus es.
 Jam venis. Bona te Venus
 Juverit, quoniam palam ^{officiis}
 Quae cupis capis et bonum
 Non abscondis amorem. 205 (198)
 Ille pulveris Africi
 Siderumque micantium ^{maris}
 Subducat numerum prius,

Qui vestri numerare vult
 Multa milia ludi. 210 (203)

Ludite ut libet et brevi
 Liberos date. Non decet
 Tam vetus sine liberis

Nomen esse, sed indidem fructu suum
 Semper ingenerari. 215 (208)

Torquatus volo parvulus,
 Matris e gremio suae
 Porrigens teneras manus,
 Dulce rideat ad patrem

 Semihiante labello. 220 (213)

Sit suo similis patri
 Manlio et facile insciis
 Noscitur ab omnibus
 Et pudicitiam suae clade

 Matris indicet ore. 225 (218)

Talis illius a bona Matre laus genus approbet,
 Qualis unica ab optima
 Matre Telemacho manet

 Fama Penelopeo. 230 (223)

Claudite ostia, virgines :
 Lusimus satis. At, boni
 Conjuges, bene vivite et Munere assidue valentem

 Exercete juventam. 235 (228)

LXII.

Juvenes.

Vesper adest juvenes, consurgite : Vesper Olympo

Expectata diu vix tandem lumina tollit.

Surgere jam tempus, jam pingues linquere mensas;

Jam veniet virgo, jam dicetur Hymenaeus.

Hymen o Hymenae, Hymen ades o Hymenae. 5

Puellae.

Cernitis, innuptae, juvenes? Consurgite contra:

Nimirum Oetaeos ostendit noctifer ignes.

Sic certe est: viden ut perniciousiter exsiluere? leap

Non temere exsiluere, canent quod visere par est.

Hymen o Hymenae, Hymen ades o Hymenae. 10

Juvenes.

Non facilis nobis, aequales, palma parata est:

Aspicite, innuptae secum ut meditata requirunt. need

Non frustra meditantur, habent memorabile quod sit,

Nec mirum, penitus quae tota mente laborant.

Nos alio mentes, alio divisimus aures; 15

Jure igitur vincemur: amat victoria curam.

Quare nunc animos saltem committite vestros;

Dicere jam incipient, jam respondere decebit.

Hymen o Hymenae, Hymen ades o Hymenae.

Puellae.

Hespere, qui caelo fertur crudelior ignis? 20

Qui natam possis complexu avellere matris,

Complexu matris retinentem avellere natam,

Et juveni ardenti castam donare puellam.

Quid faciunt hostes capta crudelius urbe?

Hymen o Hymenae, Hymen ades o Hymenae. 25

Juvenes.

Hespere, qui caelo lucet jucundior ignis?
 Qui desponsa tua firmes conubia flamma,
 Quae pepigere viri, pepigerunt ante parentes,
 Nec junxerē prius quam se tuus extulit ardor.
 Quid datur a divis felici optatius hora? 30
 Hymen o Hymenaeae, Hymen ades o Hymenaeae.

Puellae.

Hesperus e nobis, aequales, abstulit unam.

 Namque tuo adventu vigilat custodia semper.
 35
 Hymen o Hymenaeae, Hymen ades o Hymenaeae.

Juvenes.

Nocte latent fures, quos idem saepe revertens,
 Hespere, mutato comprehendis nomine eosdem.
 At libet innuptis ficto te carpere questu: quid
 Quid tum si carpunt, tacita quem mente re-quirunt? 40
 Hymen o Hymenaeae, Hymen ades o Hymenaeae.

Puellae.

Ut flos in septis secretus nascitur hortis,
 Ignotus pecori, nullo contusus aratro,
 Quem mulcent aurae, firmat sol, educat imber
 45
 Multi illum pueri, multae optavere puellae:
 Idem cum tenui carptus defloruit ungui,
 Nulli illum pueri, nullae optavere puellae.
 Sic virgo, dum intacta manet, dum cara suis est:

Cum castum amisit polluto corpore florem, 50
 Nec pueris jucunda manet, nec cara puellis.
 Hymen o Hymenaeae, Hymen ades o Hymenaeae.

Juvenes.

Ut vidua in nudo vitis quae nascitur arvo
 Nunquam se extollit, nunquam mitem educat uvam,
 Sed tenerum prono deflectens pondere corpus 55
 Jam jam contingit summum radice flagellum, indril
 Hanc nulli agricolae, nulli accolluere juvenci:
 At si forte eadem est ^{el}ulmo conjuncta marito,
 Multi illam agricolae, multi accolluere juvenci.
 Sic virgo, dum intacta manet, dum inculta senes-

Cum par connubium maturo tempore adepta est, mal
 Cara viro magis et minus est invisā parenti.

Et tu ne pugna cum tali conjuge virgo,

Non aequum est pugnare, pater cui tradidit ipse, 65
 Ipse pater cum matre, quibus parere necesse est.
 Virginitas non tota tua est; ex parte parentum est.

Tertia pars patri, pars est data tertia matri,
 Tertia sola tua est; noli pugnare duobus,
 Qui genero sua jura simul cum dote dederunt. 70

Hymen o Hymenaeae, Hymen ades o Hymenaeae.

LXIII. 4

Super alta vectus Attis celeri rate maria,

Phrygium ut nemus citato cupide pede tetigit,
Adiitque opaca silvis redimita loca deae,
Stimulatus ibi furenti rabie, vagus animis,
Devolvit ili acuto sibi pondera silice. 5
Itaque ut relictas sensit sibi membra sine viro,
Etiam recente terrae sola sanguine maculans,
Niveis citata cepit manibus leve typanum,
Typanum, tubam Cybelles, tua, mater, initia,
Quatiensque terga tauri teneris cava digitis, 10
Canere haec suis adorta est tremebunda comitibus.
'Agite, ite ad alta, Gallae, Cybeles nemora procul, Simul ite, Dindymenae dominae vaga pecora,
Aliena quae petentes velut exules loca,
Sectam meam executae, duce me mihi comites, 15
Rapidum salum tulistis truculentaque pelagi,
Et corpus evirastis Veneris nimio odio;
Hilarate aere citatis erroribus animum.
Mora tarda mente cedat; simul ite, sequimini Phrygiam ad domum Cybelles, Phrygia ad nemora deae, 20
Ubi cymbalum sonat vox, ubi tympana reboant,
Tibicen ubi canit Phryx curvo grave calamo,
Ubi capita Maenades vi jaciunt ederigerae,
Ubi sacra sancta acutis ululatibus agitant,
Ubi suevit illa divae volitare vaga cohors, 25
Quo nos decet citatis celerare tripudiis.'
Simul haec comitibus Attis cecinit, notha mulier,
Thiasus repente linguis trepidantibus ululat,
Leve tympanum remugit, cava cymbala recrepant,
Viridem citus adit Idam properante pede chorus. 30

Furibunda simul anhelans vaga vadit animam
agens

Comitata tympano Attis per opaca nemora dux,
Veluti juvenca vitans onus indomita jugi:

Rapidae ducem sequuntur Gallae properipedem.

Itaque ut domum Cybelles tetigere lassulae, 35

Nimio e labore somnum capiunt sine Cerere;

Piger his labante langore oculos sopor operit:

Abit in quiete molli rabidus furor animi.

Sed ubi oris aurei Sol radiantibus oculis

Lustravit aethera album, sola dura, mare ferum, 40

Pepulitque noctis umbras vegetis sonipedibus,

Ibi Somnus excitum Attin fugiens citus abiit:

Trepidante eum recepit dea Pasithea sinu.

Ita de quiete molli rapida sine rabie

Simul ipse pectore Attis sua facta recoluit, 45

Liquidaque mente vidit sine queis ubique foret,

Animo aestuante rursum reditum ad vada tetulit.

Ibi maria vasta visens lacrimantibus oculis,

Patriam allocuta maesta est ita voce miseriter.

‘Patria o mei creatrix, patria o mea genetrix, 50

Ego quem miser relinquens, dominos ut erifugae

Famuli solent, ad Idae tetuli nemora pedem,

Ut apud nivem et ferarum gelida stabula forem,

Et earum omnia adirem furibunda latibula,

Ubinam aut quibus locis te positam, patria, reor? 55

Cupit ipse pupula ad te sibi dirigere aciem,

Rabie fera carens dum breve tempus animus est.

Egone a mea remota haec ferar in nemora domo

Patria, bonis, amicis, genitoribus abero?

Abero foro, palaestra, stadio et gymnasiis? 60
Miser a miser, querendum est etiam atque etiam, anime.

Quod enim genus figurae est, ego quod non obierim?
Ego mulier, ego adolescens, ego ephebus, ego puer,
Ego gymnasi fui flos, ego eram decus olei;

Mihi januae frequentes, mihi limina tepida, 65
Mihi floridis corollis redimita domus erat,

Linquendum ubi esset orto mihi sole cubiculum.
Ego nunc deum ministra et Cybeles famula ferar?
Ego Maenas, ego mei pars, ego vir sterilis ero?

Ego viridis algida Idae nive amicta loca colam? 70
Ego vitam agam sub altis Phrygiae columinibus,

Ubi cerva silvicultrix, ubi aper nemorivagus?
Jam jam dolet quod egi, jam jamque paenitet.'

Roseis ut hinc labellis sonitus adiit celer
Geminas deorum ad aures nova nuntia referens, 75

Ibi juncta juga resolvens Cybele leonibus
Laevumque pecoris hostem stimulans ita loquitur.
'Agedum,' inquit, 'age ferox i, fac ut hunc furor agitet,

Fac uti furoris ictu reditum in nemora ferat,
Mea libere nimis qui fugere imperia cupit. 80

Age caede terga cauda, tua verbera patere,
Fac cuncta mugienti fremitu loca retonent,
Rutilam ferox torosa cervice quate jubam.'

Ait haec minax Cybelle religatque juga manu.
Ferus ipse sese adhortans rapidum incitat animo, 85
Vadit, fremit, refringit virgulta pede vago.
At ubi humida albicantis loca litoris adiit

Tenerumque vidit Attin prope marmora pelagi,
 Facit impetum: ille demens fugit in nemora fera:
 Ibi semper omne vitae spatium famula fuit. 90

Dea magna, dea Cybelle, dea domina Dindymi,
 Procul a mea tuus sit furor omnis, era, domo:
 Alios age incitatos, alios age rapidos.

/ LXIV.

Peliaco quondam prognatae vertice pinus
 Dicuntur liquidas Neptuni nasse per undas
 Phasidos ad fluctus et fines Aeetaeos;
 Cum lecti juvenes, Argivae robor a pubis,
 Auratam optantes Colchis avertere pellem, 5
 Ausi sunt vada salsa cita decurrere puppi,
 Caerula verrentes abiegnis aequora palmis.
 Diva quibus retinens in summis urbibus arces
 Ipsa levi fecit volitantem ^{insere} flamine currum,
 Pinea conjungens inflexae texta carinae. 10
 Illa rudem cursu prima imbuit Amphitriten;
 Quae simul ac rostro ventosum proscidit aequor,
 Tortaque remigio spumis incanduit unda,
 Emersere feri candenti e gurgite vultus,
 Aequeoreae monstrum Nereides admirantes. 15
 Illac, haudque alia, viderunt luce marinas
 Mortales oculis nudato corpore nymphas
 Nutricum tenuis extantes e gurgite cano.
 Tum Thetidis Peleus incensus fertur amore,
 Tum Thetis humanos non despexit hymenaeos, 20
 Tum Thetidi pater ipse jugandum Pelea sensit.

O nimis optato saeculorum tempore nati
Heroes, salvete, deum gens, o bona matrum
Progenies salvete iterum
Vos ego saepe meo vos carmine compellabo, 25
Teque adeo eximie taedis felicibus aucte,
Thessaliae columnen, Peleu, cui Juppiter ipse,
Ipse suos divum genitor concessit amores.
Tene Thetis tenuit pulcerrima Neptunine?
Tene suam Tethys concessit ducere neptem 30
Oceanusque, mari totum qui amplectitur orbem?
Quae simul optato finito tempore luces
Advenere, domum conventu tota frequentat
Thessalia; oppletur laetanti regia coetu.
Dona ferunt prae se, declarant gaudia vultu. 35
Deseritur Scyros, linquunt Phthiotica Tempe
Crannonisque domos ac moenia Larissaea;
Pharsaliam coeunt, Pharsalia tecta frequentant.
Rura colit nemo, mollescunt colla juvenicis;
Non humilis curvis purgatur vinea rastris, vela 40
Non glebam prono convellit vomere taurus,
Non falx attenuat frondatorum arboris umbram;
Squalida desertis rubigo infertur aratris.
Ipsius at sedes, quacunque opulenta recessit
Regia, fulgenti splendent auro atque argento; 45
Candet ebur soliis, collucent pocula mensae,
Toto domus gaudet regali splendida gaza.
Pulyinar vero divae geniale locatur
Sedibus in mediis, Indo quod dente politum
Tincta tegit roseo conchyli purpura fuco. 50
Haec vestis, priscis hominum variata figuris,

Heroum mira virtutes indicat arte.

Namque fluentisono prospectans litore Diae

Thesea cedentem celeri cum classe tuetur

Indomitos in corde gerens Ariadna furores ; 55

Necdum etiam sese, quae visit, visere credit,

Ut pote fallaci quae tum primum excita somno

Desertam in sola miseram se cernat arena.

Immemor at juvenis fugiens pellit vada remis,

Irrita ventosae linquens promissa procellae. 60

Quam procul ex alga maestis Minois ocellis,

Saxea ut effigies Bacchantis, prospicit, eheu,

Prospicit, et magnis curarum fluctuat undis,

Non flavo retinens subtilem vertice mitram,

Non contacta levi velatum pectus amictu, 65

Non tereti strophio lactentes vincta papillas,

Omnia quae toto delapsa e corpore passim

Ipsius ante pedes fluctus salis alludebant.

Sed neque tum mitrae, neque tum fluitantis amictus

Illa vicem curans, toto ex te pectore, Theseu, 70

Toto animo, tota pendebat perdita mente.

A misera, assiduis quam luctibus externavit

Spinosas Erycina serens in pectore curas,

Illa tempestate, ferox quo ex tempore Theseus,

Egressus curvis e litoribus Piraei, 75

Attigit injusti regis Gortynia templa.

Nam perhibent olim, crudeli peste coactam

Androgeoneae poenas exsolvere caedis,

Electos juvenes simul et decus innuptarum

Cecropiam solitam esse dapem dare Minotauro. 80

Queis angusta malis cum moenia vexarentur,

Ipse suum Theseus pro caris corpus Athenis
 Projicere optavit, potius quam talia Cretam
 Funera Cecropiae neefunera portarentur;
 Atque ita nave levi nitens ac lenibus auris 85
 Magnanimum ad Minoa venit sedesque superbas.
 Hunc simul ac cupido conspexit lumine virgo
 Regia, quam suaves exspirans castus odores
 Lectulus in molli complexu matris alebat,
 Quales Eurotae progignunt flumina myrtus 90
 Aurave distinctos educit verna colores,
 Non prius ex illo flagrantia declinavit
 Lumina, quam cuncto concepit corpore flammam
 Funditus atque imis exarsit tota medullis.
 Heu misere exagitans immiti corde furores, 95
 Sancte puer, curis hominum qui gaudia misces,
 Quaeque regis Golgos quaeque Idalium frondosum,
 Qualibus incensam jactastis mente puellam
 Fluctibus, in flavo saepe hospite suspirantem.
 Quantos illa tulit languenti corde timores, 100
 Quanta saepe magis fulgore expalluit auri,
 Cum saevum cupiens contra contendere monstrum
 Aut mortem oppeteret Theseus aut praemia laudis.
 Non ingrata tamen frustra munuscula divis
 Promittens tacito succendit vota labello. 105
 Nam velut in summo quatientem brachia Tauro
 Quercum, aut conigeram sudanti cortice pinum,
 Indomitus turbo contorquens flamine robur,
 Eruit—illa procul radicitus exturbata
 Prona cadit, lateque comis obit omnia frangens—110
 Sic domito saevum prostravit corpore Theseus

Nequiquam vanis jactantem cornua ventis.
 Inde pedem sospes multa cum laude reflexit
 Errabunda regens tenui vestigia filo,
 Ne labyrinthis e flexibus egredientem 115
 Tecti frustraretur inobservabilis error.

Sed quid ego, a primo digressus carmine plura
 Commemorem, ut linquens genitoris filia vultum,
 Ut consanguineae complexum, ut denique matris,
 Quae misera in grata deperdita laetabatur, 120
 Omnibus his Thesei dulcem praeoptarit amorem,
 Aut ut vecta ratis spumosa ad litora Diae
 Venerit, aut ut eam devinctam lumina somno
 Liquerit immemori discedens pectore conjux.
 Saepe illam perhibent ardenti corde furem 125
 Clarisonas imo fuisse e pectore voces,
 Ac tum praeruptos tristem conscendere montes
 Unde ~~aciem~~ in pelagi vastos protenderet aestus,
 Tum tremuli salis adversas ~~procurrere~~ in undas
 Molliam nudatae tollentem tegmina surae, 130
 Atque haec extremis ~~maestam~~ dixisse querellis,
 Frigidulos udo singultus ore cientem.

115 Siccine me patriis avectam, perfide, ab aris, alluvio
 Perfide, deserto liquisti in litore, Theseu?
 Siccine discedens neglecto numine divum 135
 Immemor a devota domum perjuria portas?
 Nullane res potuit crudelis flectere mentis
 Consilium? tibi nulla fuit clementia praesto, hanc
 Immite ut nostri te vellet miserescere pectus?
 At non haec quondam nobis promissa dedisti 140
 Voce, mihi non haec miserae sperare jubebas,

Sed conubia laeta, sed optatos hymenaeos,
 Quae cuncta aerēi ^{scattered} discerpunt irrita venti.
 Tum jam nulla viro juranti femina credat,
 Nulla viri speret sermones esse fideles; 145
 Quae, dum aliquid cupiens animus praegestit apisci,
 Nil metuunt jurare, nihil promittere parcunt,
 Sed, simul ac cupidae mentis satiata libido est,
 Dicta nihil ^{metu} metuere, nihil perjuria curant.
 Certe ego te in medio versantem turbine leti 150
 Eripui et potius germanum amittere crevi,
 Quam tibi fallaci supremo in tempore deessem.
 Pro quo dilaceranda feris dabor alitibusque
 Praeda, neque injecta tumulabor mortua terra.
 Quaenam te genuit sola sub rupe leaena, 155
 Quod mare conceptum spumantibus expuit undis,
 Quae Syrtis, quae Scylla rapax, quae vasta Charybdis, Talia qui reddis pro dulci praemia vita?
 Si tibi non cordi fuerant conubia nostra,
 Saeva quod ^{voluit} horrebas ^{stans} prisci praecepta parentis, 160
 At tamen in vestras potuisti ducere sedes,
 Quae tibi jucundo famularer serva labore,
 Candida permulcens liquidis vestigia lymphis
 Purpureave tuum consternens veste cubile.
 Sed quid ego ignaris nequiquam conquerar auris, 165
 Externata malo, quae nullis sensibus auctae
 Nec missas audire queunt nec reddere voces?
 Ille autem prope jam mediis versatur in undis,
 Nec quisquam apparet vacua mortalis in alga.
 Sic nimis insultans extremo tempore saeva 170
 Fors etiam nostris invidit questibus aures.

Gnosia Cecropiae tetigissent litora puppes,
Indomito nec dira ferens stipendia tauro
Perfidus in Creta religasset navita funem, spe 175
Nec malus hic, celans dulci crudelia forma
Consilia, in nostris requiesset sedibus hospes.

Nam quo me referam? quali spe perdita nitor?
Idomeneosne petam montes? an gurgite lato
Discernens ponti truculentum ubi dividit aequor? 180
An patris auxilium sperem? quemne ipsa reliqui,
Respersum juvenem fraterna caede secuta?

Conjugis an fido consoler memet amore?
Quine fugit lentos incurvans gurgite remos?

Vos nolite pati nostrum vanescere luctum, 200
Sed quali solam Theseus me mente reliquit,

Tali mente, deae, funestet seque suosque ?'

Has postquam maesto profudit pectore voces,
Supplicium saevis exposcens anxia factis,
Annuit invicto caelestum numine rector, 205
Quo tunc et tellus atque horrida contremuere
Aequora concussitque micantia sidera mundus.
Ipse autem caeca mentem caligine Theseus
Consitus oblito dimisit pectore cuncta,
Quae mandata prius constanti mente tenebat; 210
Dulcia nec maesto sustollens signa parenti

'Nate mihi longa jucundior unice vita,

Reddite in extrema nuper mihi fine senectae,
Quandoquidem fortuna mea ac tua fervida virtus
Eripit invito mihi te, cui languida nondum 220

 Ut simul ac nostros invisent lumina colles
 Funestam antennae deponant undique vestem, 235
 Candidaque intorti sustollant vela rudentes,
 Quam primum cernens ut laeta gaudia mente
 Agnoscam, cum te reducem aetas prospera sistet.'

Haec mandata prius constanti mente tenentem
 Thesea ceu pulsae ventorum flamine nubes 240
 Aereum nivei montis liquere cacumen.

At pater, ut summa prospectum ex arce petebat,
 Anxia in assiduos absumens lumina fletus,
 Cum primum inflati conspexit lintea veli,
 Praecipitem sese scopulorum e vertice jecit, 245
 Amissum credens immiti Thesea fato.

Sic funesta domus ingressus tecta paterna

 Euhoe, Bacchantes, euhoe, caput inflectentes.
 Harum pars tecta quatiebant cuspide thyrsos,

Post vento crescente magis magis increbrescunt, 275

Purpureaque procul nantes a luce refulgent ;

Sic tum vestibuli linquentes regia tecta

Ad se quisque vago passim pede discedebant. //

Quorum post abitum princeps e vertice Peli

Advenit Chiron portans silvestria dona : 280

Nam quodcumque ferunt campi, quos Thessala magnis

Montibus ora creat, quos propter fluminis undas

Aura parit flores tepidi fecunda Favoni,

Hos in distinctis plexos tulit ipse corollis,

Quo permulsa domus jucundo risit odore. 285

Confestim Peneus adest, viridantia Tempe,

Tempe, quæ silvae cingunt super impendentes,

Minosim linquens Doris celebranda choreis,

Non vacuus ; namque ille tulit radicitus altas

Fagos ac recto proceras stipite laurus, 290

Non sine nutanti platano lentaque sorore
 Flammati Phaethontis et aerea cupressu.
 Haec circum sedes late contexta locavit,
 Vestibulum ut molli velatum fronde vireret.
 Post hunc consequitur sollerti corde Prometheus, 295
 Extenuata gerens veteris vestigia poenae,
 Quam quondam silici restrictus membra catena
 Persolvit pendens e verticibus praeruptis.
 Inde pater divum sancta cum conjuge natisque
 Advenit caelo, te solum, Phoebe, relinquens 300
 Unigenamque simul cultricem montibus Idri:
 Pelea nam tecum pariter soror aspernata est,
 Nec Thetidis taedas voluit celebrare jugales.

Qui postquam niveis flexerunt sedibus artus,
 Large multiplici constructae sunt dape mensae, 305
 Cum interea infirmo quatientes corpora motu
 Veridicos Parcae coeperunt edere cantus.
 His corpus tremulum complectens undique vestis
 Candida purpurea talos incinxerat ora,
 At roseo niveae residebant vertice vittae, 310
 Aeternumque manus carpebant rite laborem.
 Laeva colum molli lana retinebat amictum,
 Dextera tum leviter deducens fila supinis
 Formabat digitis, tum prono in pollice torquens
 Libratum tereti versabat turbine fusum; 315
 Atque ita decerpens aequabat semper opus dens,
 Lanaeque aridulis haerebant morsa labellis
 Quae prius in levi fuerant extantia filo.
 Ante pedes autem candentis mollia lanæ
 Vellera virgati custodibant calathisci. 320

Haec tum clarisona pellentes vellera voce
 Talia divino fuderunt carmine fata,
 Carmine, perfidiae quod post nulla arguet aetas.

‘O decus eximium magnis virtutibus augens,
 Emathiae tutāmen opis, clarissime nato, 325
 Accipe quod laeta pandunt tibi luce sorores,
 Veridicum oraculum: sed vos, quae fata sequuntur,
 Currite ducentes subtegmina, currite, fusi.

Adveniet tibi jam portans optata maritis
 Hesperus, adveniet fausto cum sidere conjux, 330
 Quae tibi flexo animo mentis perfundat amorem,
 Languidulosque paret tecum conjungere somnos,
 Levia substernens robusto brachia collo.
 Currite ducentes subtegmina, currite, fusi.

Nulla domus tales unquam contextit amores, 335
 Nullus amor tali conjunxit foedere amantes,
 Qualis adest Thetidi, qualis concordia Peleo.
 Currite ducentes subtegmina, currite, fusi.

Nascetur vobis expers terroris Achilles,
 Hostibus haud tergo sed forti pectore notus. 340
 Qui persaepe vago victor certamine cursus
 Flammea praevertet celeris vestigia cervae.
 Currite ducentes subtegmina, currite, fusi.

Non illi quisquam bello se conferet heros,
 Cum Phrygii Teucro manabunt sanguine campi 345
 Troicaque obsidens longinquo moenia bello
 Perjuri Pelopis vastabit tertius heres.
 Currite ducentes subtegmina, currite, fusi.

Illius egregias virtutes claraque facta
Saepe fatebuntur natorum in funere matres 350

Cum in cinerem canos solvent a vertice crines
Putridaque infirmis variabunt pectora palmis.
Currite ducentes subtegmina, currite, fusi.

Namque velut densas prosternens cultor ^{cutt}aristas ^{care of com}
Sole sub ardenti flaventia demetit arva, ^{land} 355
Trojugenum infesto prosternet corpora ferro.
Currite ducentes subtegmina, currite, fusi.

Testis erit magnis virtutibus unda Scamandri,
Quae passim rapido diffunditur Hellesponto, ^{from all sides}
Cujus iter caecis angustans corporum acervis ^{heads} 360
Alta tepefaciet permixta flumina caede. ^{redder}
Currite ducentes subtegmina, currite, fusi.

Denique testis erit morti quoque reddita praeda,
Cum teres excelso coacervatum aggere bustum ^{loot}
Excipiet niveos percussae virginis artus. 365
Currite ducentes subtegmina, currite, fusi.

Nam simul ac fessis dederit fors copiam Achivis
Urbis Dardaniae Neptunia solvere vincla,
Alta Polyxenia madeſcent caede sepulcra,
Quae, velut ancipiti succumbens victima ferro, 370
Projiciet truncum submisso poplite corpus. ^{knees}
Currite ducentes subtegmina, currite, fusi.

Quare agite optatos animi conjungite amores.
Accipiat conjux felici foedere divam,
Dedatur cupido jam dudum nupta marito. 375
Currite ducentes subtegmina, currite, fusi.

Non illam nutrix orienti luce revisens
 Hesterno collum poterit circumdare filo.
 Currite ducentes subtegmina, currite, fusi.

Anxia nec mater discordis maesta puellae anxiously 380
 Secubitu caros mittet sperare nepotes,
 Currite ducentes subtegmina, currite, fusi.

Talia praefantes quondam felicia Pelei, relating Carmina divino cecinerunt pectore Parcae.
 Praesentes namque ante domos invisere castas 385
 Heroum et sese mortali ostendere coetu
 Coelicolae, nondum spreta pietate, solebant. displeased
 Saepe pater divum templo in fulgente revisens,
 Annua cum festis venissent sacra diebus,
 Conspexit terra centum procumbere tauros: 390
 Saepe vagus Liber Parnasi vertice summo
 Thyiadas effusis evantes crinibus egit,
 Cum Delphi tota certatim ex urbe tuentes
 Acciperent laeti divum fumantibus aris:
 Saepe in letifero belli certamine Mavors 395

Aut rapidi Tritonis era aut Rhamnusiae virgo
 Armatae hominum est praesens hortata catervas.
 Sed postquam tellus scelere est imbuta nefando
 Justitiamque omnes cupida de mente fugarunt,
 Perfudere manus fraterno sanguine fratres, def 400
 Destitit extinctos natus lugere parentes, lament
 Optavit genitor primaevi funera nati just born
 Liber ut innuptae poteretur flore novercae,
 Ignaro mater substernens se impia nato,
 Impia, non verita est divos scelerare parentes, 405

Omnia fanda nefanda malo permixta furore
 Justificam nobis mentem avertere deorum.
 Quare nec tales dignantur visere coetus,
 Nec se contingi patiuntur lumine claro.

LXV.

Etsi me assiduo confectum cura dolore
 Sevocat a doctis, Ortale, virginibus, to mature
 Nec potis est dulces Musarum expromere fetus

 Namque mei nuper Lethaeo gurgite fratris 5

 Nunquam ego te, vita frater amabilior, 10
 Aspiciam posthac? At certe semper amabo,
 Semper maesta tua carmina morte canam,
 Qualia sub densis ramorum concinit umbris
 Daulias, absumpti fata gemens Ityli.
 Sed tamen in tantis maeroribus, Ortale, mitto 15
 Haec expressa tibi carmina Battiadae, transla
 Ne tua dicta vagis nequiquam credita ventis
 Effluxisse meo forte putes animo, slipped
 Ut missum sponsi furtivo munere malum
 Procurrit casto virginis e gremio, 20
 Quod miserae, oblitae molli sub veste locatum,
 Dum adventu matris prosilit, excutitur,
 Atque illud prono praeceps agitur decursu,
 Huic manat tristi conscius ore rubor.

LXVI.

Omnia qui magni dispexit lumina mundi,
Qui stellarum ortus comperit atque obitus,
Flammeus ut rapidi solis nitor obscuretur,
Ut cedant certis sidera temporibus,
Ut Triviam furtim sub Latmia saxa relegans 5
Dulcis amor gyro devocet aereo,
Idem me ille Conon caelesti numine vidit
E Bereniceo vertice caesariem
Fulgentem clare, quam multis illa dearum
Levia protendens brachia pollicita est, 10
Qua rex tempestate novo auctus hymenaeo
Vastatum fines iverat Assyrios,
Dulcia nocturnae portans vestigia rixae
Quam de virginiis gesserat exuviis.
Estne novis nuptis odio Venus, atque parentum 15
Frustrantur falsis gaudia lacrimulis,
Uberrim thalami quas intra limina fundunt?
Non—ita me divi—vera gemunt—juerint.
Id mea me multis docuit regina querellis,
Invisente novo praelia torva viro. 20
At tu non orbum luxti deserta cubile,
Sed fratris cari flebile discidium,
Cum penitus maestas exedit cura medullas?
Ut tibi tunc toto pectore sollicitae
Sensibus ereptis mens excidit! at te ego certe 25
Cognoram a parva virgine magnanimam.
Anne bonum oblita es facinus, quo regium adepta es
Conjugium, quod non fortior ausit alis?

Sed tum maesta virum mittens quae verba locuta es!

Juppiter, ut tristi lumina saepe manu! 30
Quis te mutavit tantus deus? An quod amantes

Non longe a caro corpore abesse volunt?
Atque ibi me cunctis pro dulci conjuge divis
Non sine taurino sanguine pollicita es,
Si reditum tetulisset. Is haud in tempore longo 35

Captam Asiam Aegypti finibus addiderat.

Queis ego pro factis caelesti reddita coetu

Pristina vota novo munere dissoluo.

Invita o regina tuo de vertice cessi,

Invita—adjuro teque tuumque caput, 40
Digna ferat, quod siquis inaniter adjuravit—

Sed qui se ferro postulet esse parem?

Ille quoque eversus mons est, quem maximum in oris

Progenies Thiae clara supervehitur,

Cum Medi peperere novum mare cumque juvenus 45

Per medium classi barbara navit Athon.

Quid facient crines, cum ferro talia cedant?

Juppiter, ut Chalybum omne genus pereat,

Et qui principio sub terra quaerere venas

Institit ac ferri stringere duritiem! 50

Abjunctae paulo ante comae mea fata sorores

Lugebant, cum se Memnonis Aethiopis

Unigena impellens mutantibus aera pennis

Obtulit, Arsinoes Locridos ales equus,

Isque per aetherias me tollens advolat umbras 55

Et Veneris casto collocat in gremio.

Ipsa suum Zephyritis eo famulum legarat,
Graia Canopeis incola litoribus.
Hii dii uen ibi vario ne solum in limine caeli
Ex Ariadneis aurea temporibus 60
Fixa corona foret, sed nos quoque fulgeremus
Devotae flavi verticis exuviae,
Uvidulum a fluctu cedentem ad templa deum me
Sidus in antiquis diva novum posuit;
Virginis et saevi contingens namque Leonis 65
Lumina, Callisto juxta Lycaoniam,
Vertor in occasum, tardum dux ante Booten
Qui vix sero alto mergitur Oceano.
Sed quanquam me nocte premunt vestigia divum,
Lux autem canae Tethyi restituit— 70
Pace tua fari hic liceat, Rhamnusia virgo,
Namque ego non ullo vera timore tegam,
Nec si me infestis discerpent sidera dictis
Condita qui veri pectoris evoluo—
Non his tam laetor rebus, quam me afore semper, 75
Afore me a dominae vertice discrucior,
Quicum ego dum virgo quondam fuit omnibus expers
Unguentis una milia multa bibi.
Nunc vos, optato quas junxit lumine taeda, trach
Non post unanimis corpora conjugibus 80
Tradite, nudantes rejecta veste papillas,
Quin jucunda mihi munera libet onyx,
Vester onyx, casto petitis quae jura cubili.
Sed, quae se impuro dedit adulterio,
Illius a! mala dona levis bibat irrita pulvis, 85
Namque ego ab indignis praemia nulla peto.

Sed magis, o nuptae, semper concordia vestras
Semper amor sedes accolat assiduus.

Tu vero, regina, tuens cum sidera divum

Placabis festis luminibus Venerem, 90

Sanguinis expertem non jusseris esse tuum me;

Sed potius largis effice muneribus

Sidera cur iterent: 'utinam coma regia fiam,

Proximus Hydrochoi fulgeret Oarion.'

LXVIII A.

Quod mihi fortuna casuque oppressus acerbo

Conscriptum hoc lacrimis mittis epistolium,

Naufragum ut ejectum spumantibus aequoris undis

Sublevem et a mortis limine restituum,—

'Quem neque Sancta Venus molli requiescere somno 5

Desertum in lecto caelibe perpetitur; alio

Nec veterum dulci scriptorum carmine Musae,

Oblectant, cum mens anxia pervigilat,'—

Id gratum est mihi, me quoniam tibi dicis amicum,

Muneraque et Musarum hinc petis et Veneris: 10

Sed tibi ne mea sint ignota incommoda, Manli,

Neu me odisse putes hospitis officium,

Accipe queis merser fortunae fluctibus ipse

Ne amplius a misero dona beata petas.

Tempore quo primum vestis mihi tradita pura est, 15

Jucundum cum aetas florida ver ageret,

Multa satis lusi: non est dea nescia nostri

Quae dulcem curis miscet amaritiam. autem

Sed totum hoc studium luctu fraterna mihi mors

Abstulit. O misero frater adempte mihi, 20

Tu mea tu moriens fregisti commoda, frater,
 Tecum una tota est nostra sepulta domus;
 Omnia tecum una perierunt gaudia nostra,
 Quae tuus in vita dulcis alebat amor. Veronae
 Cujus ego interitu tota de mente fugavi 25
 Haec studia atque omnes delicias animi.
 Quare quo scribis—'Veronae turpe, Catulle,
 Esse, quod hic, quisquis de meliore nota
 Frigida deserto tepefactat membra cubili'—
 Id, Manli, non est turpe, magis miserum est. 30
 Ignosces igitur si, quae mihi luctus ademit,
 Haec tibi non tribuo munera, cum nequeo. 3 carmin
 Nam quod scriptorum non magna est copia apud me,
 Hoc fit quod Romae vivimus: illa domus,
 Illa mihi sedes, illic mea carpitur aetas; 35
 Huc una ex multis capsula me sequitur.
 Quod cum ita sit, nolim statuas nos mente maligna
 Id facere aut animo non satis ingenuo,
 Quod tibi non utriusque petenti copia posta est:
 Ultro ego deferrem, copia siqua foret. 40

NOTES.

I.

P. 1. 1. 'To whom am I to give my dainty, new-born little volume?' The words lepidum and novum mean both that the book is bright and new from the publisher's hands, and that it contains delicate wit presented in a form new to Latin literature.

2. pumice. For the use of pumice stone in the preparation of books, see XXII. 6 note.

3. Corneli. Corn. Nepos, compatriot of Catullus and about eight years his senior, chiefly known as biographer of illustrious men, but also writer of love poems now lost. The 'Chronica' here referred to are also lost.

4. aliquid in opposition to nugas. Catullus calls his light poems 'nothings,' but his friend always considered them 'of serious value,' 'a something of importance.' Si vis esse aliquis = if you would be a somebody. Translate 'would set upon my trifles no trifling value.'

6. explicare, to unfold and show as a whole, as a robe-maker exhibits his wares (explicat vestem), or as a general reviews his troops (explicat ordines), so that all may be comprehended at a glance. Here the word almost = 'tabulate.'

7. laboriosis is said to mean 'on which labour has been spent,' according to A. Gellius, who (N. A. ix. 12) quotes a line from Catullus' friend, Calvus,

'Durum rus fugis et laboriosum,' and explains the last word as 'in quo laboratur.' But Calvus means 'the hard, work-a-day country,' employing the simple personification which is also used here. If carta (a sheet) can be called docta (learned), it may also be called laboriosa (diligent): and in LXVIII B. 6 (46), we find 'carta loquatur anus.' The whole of Gellius' article is confused and unfortunate.

8. quicquid hoc libelli, 'Therefore take to yourself all there is in this of a little book: whatever its worth may perhaps be, yet may it, O guardian maiden, endure without fading more than one generation.' The best MSS. read Qualecumque quod, for which quidem is the earliest and perhaps best correction. Ellis reads:

*'Quare habe tibi quicquid hoc libelli
Qualecumque: quod o patrona virgo'*

= 'Take this slight book, such as it is, and may it,' &c. The virgo may be Minerva, or the Muse. Cf. LXVIII B. 1-6 (40-46). Munro thinks neither appropriate, and, after Bergk, reads:

'Qualecumque quidem patronei ut ergo'

= 'that, poor as it perhaps may be, yet for its patron's sake it may endure.' This makes capital sense, but there is no evidence that Catullus wrote it.

On the Hendecasyllabic metre of this poem see Appendix I.

II.

1. deliciae, 'my lady's pet': so 'amores' = 'mistress,' 'favourite.'

3. primum digitum, 'finger tip,' not 'first finger,' which is called index.

adpetenti, 'reaching forward to catch.' Translate 'to whose sallies she will offer her finger tip.'

5. desiderio 'my heart's desire.' Cicero (Fam. XIV. 2 fin.) writes to his wife 'mea lux, mea desideria, valete.' For the "Lover's vocabulary" in Catullus see Appendix II.

nitenti, 'bright-eyed.'

6. Carum nescio quid, like solacium, is accusative after jocari. On the 'cognate' acc. see VII. 9 note. Translate 'is pleased to play I know not what dear frolic and soft diversion of her pain.'

credo. 'And well she may: would that I, like your mistress and mine, when my crushing fire shall slacken, could make merry with you !' Credo, as usual, is isolated and abrupt: it implies that Lesbia is sure to find solace in so sweet a bird.

gravis ardor : cf. gravis aestus, LXVIII B. 22. Ellis reads :

'Et solacium sui doloris,
Credo, et cum gravis acquiescit ardor :'

= 'either as a gentle assuagement of her pain or when,' &c. Solacium he puts in 'apposition with the clause nescio quid libet joculari,' or perhaps would regard it, with Lachmann, as a second nominative to libet. But libet cannot have a substantive for subject; for only neuter pronouns can stand as nominatives to impersonal verbs. Munro suggests with confidence :

8. 'Credo ut, cum gravis acquiescet ardor,

7. Sit solacium sui doloris,'

and distinguishes dolor as the pain felt by Lesbia when her lover is away, ardor as her fevered excitement in his presence.

Baehrens alters et to in before solacium, and reads the next verse :

'(Credo, tum gravis acquiescet ardor).'

All these alterations are uncertain and antagonistic.

P. 2. 10. curas is specially used of the pains of love. So Hor. A. P. 85:

'Et juvenum curas et libera vina referri.'

Cf. LXIV. 96, LXVIII. 18.

11-13. tam gratum est. Ellis would translate, 'To play with you would be as welcome,' &c. But these lines are more probably a fragment of another piece accidentally attached to the already complete poem on account of the similarity of metre. This may also have occurred XIV. 24-26, LI. 13-16, LXV. 19-24, LXVIII. (41 ad fin.).

puellae, Atalanta, who would only 'loose her girdle' (part of the marriage ceremonial) to one who surpassed her in speed of foot. Milanion entered the contest, and, as they ran, flung on the course a golden apple. This she was tempted to pick up, and by doing so checked her speed and lost the race.

aureolum, 'daintily gilded,' or 'delicate-golden.'

soluit is a trisyllable. Cf. LXI. 53, zonula soluunt sinus; LXVI. 38, dissoluo; 74, evoluo.

III.

1. 'Goddesses of beauty, gods of passion, and all there are among men of higher beauty, come and mourn.'

This poem has been often imitated, often translated. It is a characteristic specimen of Catullus' style, showing the natural symmetry of his thought, the simple directness of his expression. After the invocation, half the poem tells the preciousness and the graces of the bird, half the sadness of its lot and the bereavement of its mistress. The words are so unaffected, and their order seems so spontaneous,

'ut sibi quivis
Speret idem, sudet multum frustra que laboret
Ausus idem.'

2. quantum, &c. See Appendix II. on Catullus' phraseology.

7. ipsam Ellis bids us take with matrem, 'as well as the child knows her very mother.' But suam is thus left incomplete; and it is awkward and unCatullian to say ipsam tam bene quam for tam bene quam ipsam. Lachmann would read 'ipsa.' Suam ipsam = 'his own mistress.'

8. sese is emphatic: 'nor would he dislodge himself.'

13. at used in sudden imprecation: cf. XXVIII. 14:

'At vobis mala multa di deaque
Dent, opprobria Romuli Remique.'

'Out! shame upon you, shameful shades of Orcus, that swallow in your depths all pretty things!'

17. tua opera, 'by your doing,' 'you are to blame for that.' Compare Ovid. Am. II. x. 26:

'Decepta est opera nulla puella mea'
= 'no maiden can blame me for her betrayal.'

18. 'My mistress' sweet eyes are sadly swollen and red with tears.' Flendo: so fando = 'with words' (Verg. Aen. II. 6).

turgiduli. Catullus uses diminutive nouns, proper names, adjectives, adverbs, and even verbs: see Appendix II.

IV.

1. Catullus points out to some guests his old yacht. Made at Cytorus or Amastris (the first the name of the hill, the second of the town) in Paphlagonia (at this time part of the province of Bithynia), it had received him on board at its 'birthplace' (or, according to Munro, at some port on the Propontis), and had carried him, by Rhodes and the Cyclades, along the Adriatic coast, and by the rivers Po and Mincio, into the lake Benacus (now Lago di Garda), on the island or peninsula of which, Sirmio (see XXXI.), the poet had a country seat. Here the vessel now lay, beached or docked, in honourable superannuation.

It seems probable that in many of Catullus' poems, however they present to us the freshness of originality, he freely imitated a Greek model. See on LI., LXI., LXII., LXIII., LXIV., LXVI. The Grecisms in this poem are the gender of phaselus (generally feminine in Latin), the construction *ait fuisse celerrimus*¹ (an enlargement in the Greek spirit of existing Latin idiom, not peculiar to Catullus; see Hor. Ep. I. vii. 22, ait esse paratus, and cf. Verg. II. 377, &c.), together with the attraction of the gender of the adjective (cf. Hor. Sat. I. ix. 4, dulcissime rerum, &c.), the case-ending and lengthening of Propontida, and the lengthening of the final syllable of impotentia, the vocative form Amastris, and the sudden change to direct address, together with the position of Tibi. The metre is Pure Iambic : see Appendix I.

P. 3. 3. impetum. 'No timber floated whose dash she failed to head, whether called to wing her way with light blade or with canvas.' The oars were the ship's wings (πτερά νηός, Homer) as well as the sails.

6. Adriatici. The journey is traced backwards, from the Italian coast to the Euxine.

8. nobilem, 'renowned in story.'

Thraciam, adjective agreeing with Propontida.

10. 'Where that, the yacht of after-time, was earlier a leafy wood ; for many a day, on Cytorus ridge, she sent forth whispers from her prattling leafage.'

15. ultima, 'from the remotest spring of her life,' or 'from the primal germ of her race.'

¹ It is to be remarked that the MSS. read celerrimum.

17. imbuisse combines the notions of dipping into water and of initiation, like our 'baptise.'

18. inde, 'thence' (Ellis) or 'next' (Munro).

impotentia, 'ungoverned.' Impotens = without self-control. Comp. Hor. Od. i. xxxvii. 10, 'quid libet impotens sperare' = 'unmanned enough to hope for anything.' Contrast 'potens sui' = 'lord of himself.'

19. 'Whether the breeze whistled to larboard or to starboard, or the bright weather followed fair and took with one leap both sheets.'

Jupp. secundus = a fair following wind (Juppiter by itself expresses bright weather). Simul . . . pedem = lay on the sail so as to pull both sheets (the sail being a square sail) equally taut, while the vessel ran before the wind; in the former words ('laeva . . . aura') she is represented as tacking right or left.

22. litoralibus diis: Glauco et Panopeae et Inoo Melicertae. Verg. G. i. 436.

23. sibi, 'for her.' Possibly 'by her'; but sibi = a se more commonly in later Latinity.

esse facta = 'had been made.'

24. novissime = 'last of all,' a mari = on leaving the sea for the rivers.

Many editors would emend to a mari novissimo = 'from the farthest part of the sea,' but without occasion.

ad usque = 'on and on until reaching,' 'right up to.' Cf. CXVI. 4:

Telis infeste mittere in usque caput.

25. 'But these are by-gones: now in sequestered rest she spends her age, consecrating herself to thee, O Castor, brother-twin, and to thee, twin-brother of Castor.'

fuere, 'belong to the past.' Cf. Verg. Aen. ii. 325:

'Fuimus Troes, fuit Ilium et ingens Gloria Teucrorum.'

senet = 'is old,' not 'grows old,' which would require senescit.

V.

1. This poem contains the creed of all passionate lovers, since lovers began. To translate without spoiling it has been the ambition of many, but no one has yet succeeded :

'Multi illam agricolae, multi accolluere juvenci.'

Compare in this respect the dialogue of the coquetting lovers, Hor. Od. III. ix.

On Lesbia, see Introduction.

vivamus = make the best of life. Comp. 'vixi,' Hor. Od. III. xxix. 43.

2. 'Valuing all the gossip of over-serious sages at a poor pennyworth.'

P. 4. 5. 'But for us, once our little day has reached its setting, waits a sheer night of sleep, never to be broken.'

6. perpetua = continuous.

8. mille altera, 'another thousand,' mille and centum are regarded as neuters plural: so 'altera' (decem), Virg. Ec. III. 71.

9. usque = continuing, 'yet again.'

10. conturbabimus. Conturbare rationes or tabulas = to 'wreck the accounts,' as by the addition of confusing figures, said of fraudulent bankrupts: see Mayor's Juvenal, vii. 129 note, for the usage of the word. Catullus' plan, to obscure the total of kisses, is to kiss without counting.

ne sciamus. It is an ancient superstition that you should never know the exact number of your blessings, lest calamity follow: cf. David numbering his people, 2 Sam. xxiv. The knowledge in possession of another person gives him a dangerous power over you. Compare the last two lines of VII.

12. 'Or any miscreant have power to blight with envy.'

VII.

1. In v. Catullus is kissed by Lesbia, here he kisses her—a difference purely grammatical.

2. tuae, 'of you,' not 'of yours,' see v. 9.

superque. The conjunctive particles et, que, τε, καί, are often used where we should employ the disjunctive 'or.'

3. numerus = 'quantity.' See Mayor's Second Philippic, xxvii. § 66. It is better, however, to translate numerus as 'multitude,' taking arenae as a collective noun = 'grains of sand.' Compare LXI. 206:

*'Illa pulveris Africi
Siderumque micantium Subducatur numerum prius.'*

and Hor. 'numeroque carentis arenae.'

4. laserpic. = σιλφιοφόρος, Strabo 133. The plant silphium or laserpicium, from which laser (assa foetida) was drawn, grew in the district called Cyrenae, and was an emblem of the city Cyrene, whose founder, Battus, was honoured as a god after death.

5. Jovis = 'of Juppiter Ammon,' whose oracular temple in the oasis called Ammonium, was visited by Alexander.

7. tacet = 'tells no tales.' It might possibly mean 'when the night is moonless.' Cf. Verg. Aen. II. 255:

'tacitae per amica silentia lunae.'

Cato uses 'luna silens' = interlunia.

9. Literally 'to kiss you so many kisses,' te being accusative of object, basia cognate accusative.

The 'cognate' accusative is of two kinds: (a) it expresses by a substantive the material result of the action signified by the verb, as οικοδομῶ δόμον, aedes aedifico; 'sternere approbationem' (XLV.); (b) or merely reiterates the action of the verb in a nominal form, generally for the convenience of modifying the action by an epithet in the shape of an adjective (as multa here).

10. Vesano. Cf. vesaniente vento (xxv. 13), furorque vecors (xv. 14, xl. 4), vemens (L. ad fin.). In these words the prefix seems privative in force. But vepallida (Hor. Sat. I. ii. 129) and vegrandis (Pers. I. 97) seem to mean 'very pale,' 'very great.'

11. curiosi = 'busy bodies.'

12. fascinare = βασκαίνειν (root βα = φα = fa. Cf. βάζειν, φήμι, fari) originally meant 'to use words about a person,' hence 'cast a spell over': fascinum, like βασκάνιον, signifies an amulet worn to repel witchcraft.

IX.

1. Veranni. Verannius, as we learn from XII., went to Spain with Fabullus, another friend of Catullus; and they were probably together again in Macedonia, on the staff of the proconsul L. Piso Caesoninus (57 B.C.), while Catullus was in Bithynia. They shared the poet's pleasures and poverty at Rome (XIII., XXVIII., XLVII.), but are otherwise unknown.

2. antistans, 'worth more to me than.'

mil. trecentis = any great number. Cf. XLVII. 3:

'Usque ad milia basiem trecenta.'

P. 5. 7. loca nationes, 'scenes and feats and peoples.'

8. ut mos est tuus = in your own interesting manner, 'as you alone can tell.'

applicansque collum, 'and drawing your neck towards me, I will seal your genial face and eyes with lovers' kisses.' Not 'laying my neck on yours,' but clasping my hands behind your neck and drawing you near me.

10. quantum beatiorum, 'O all ye favourites of fortune, what is gladder or more fortunate than I?'

Ellis would make this, not an appeal to happy men, but an indefinite phrase = 'out of all fortune's favourites what is,' &c. The similar phrase, however, III. 2, 'quantum est hominum venustiorum,' is a direct address, and the sudden turning to the vocative is in Catullus' manner.

X.

1. 'As I idled in the square, my friend Varus carried me away to call upon his mistress, a little naught—I was at once convinced—confessedly as full of wit as she was charming.'

6. quid esset, &c., 'what were the present state and prospects of Bithynia, and how much money had it been worth to me?'

9-13. 'I answered, with simple truth, that there was no chance even for governors, much less for subalterns, to come home with larded locks—least of all when they had a scoundrel for governor, and he cared not a straw for the staff.'

ipsis with praetoribus, before which nec is repeated for emphasis. Quisquam = any of the members of the staff, to whom quibus also refers.

praetor. C. Memius Gemellus, who, if Catullus' description of him is to be taken literally, was the last person in the world to have a poem like that of Lucretius dedicated to him. Cf. XXVIII.

If non faceret be read (Ellis), we must suppose an asyndeton. If non facerent, the subject will be the antecedent of quibus, i.e., the Bithynians, and ipsis must probably be taken, in the same way, for the people in the province. This would not agree well with v. 11.

Munro puts a full stop at cohorti, makes v. 11 an interrogation in oratio obliqua, and reads nec faceret in v. 13—translating 'why should any of us bring home our persons in gayer trim, especially when our praetor was a dirty fellow and cared not for his staff one straw?' He also refers ipsis to the provincials. Other commentators have probably been prevented from adopting this punctuation by the abruptness it introduces into what seems to flow naturally as a single sentence. There is also some awkwardness in this mention of the native people as 'having nothing,' when the charge against the praetor is, apparently, that he would not assist his staff to use what little opportunity there was to fill their 'knapsacks' (cf. XXVIII.)

15. comparasti, 'levied' or 'collected and trained.'

16-23. 'Adopting the tone of a man of means in the presence of the lady, "No," said I, "I was not so pinched, although a poor province had been my misfortune, as not to set up my eight straight-backed fellows." That was a bounce—I had not a creature, at home or abroad, fit to shoulder a broken old bed leg.'

unum beatiorem. The comparative seems throughout this piece to be used in the colloquial sense of a modified positive, no special contrast being meant; so also 'quantum est hominum beatorum,' IX. 10, III. 2, XII. 3, XXXIII. 3, 4, which suggest that here unum beatiorem may = unum e beatoribus. Ellis similarly would render 'a particularly lucky fellow,' comparing xxxvii. 17. It is to be admitted that the use of unus with a comparative of this kind requires illustration. Perhaps therefore we must understand quam ceteram cohortem (Munro), and translate 'wishing to make myself out the happy exception.'

P. 6. 24. ut . . . cinaediorum, 'playing her wicked part to perfection.' The coarser terms of abuse in Catullus are not to be taken in their particular meanings, except in certain definite contexts, but rather as words of general condemnation. In the same way a foreigner must discount the language of our English lower classes.

26. commodā seems to be the imperative of commodare, 'to lend.' But there is no other example of the shortening of the final vowel in a polysyllabic imperative.

Many emendations have been suggested; as Hand's

'Istos: commodum enim volo ad Sarapim,'

where da is understood before Istos, and commodum = just in time; or Munro's 'commode enim' = comfortably; or Ellis' 'commoneam. Volo' (com. = 'give an order to'); or W. S. Landor's 'Eram volo ad Sarapim' = 'to Lady Serapis' temple.' The worship of Serapis came from Sinope to Alexandria; thence, with other Egyptian cults, to Rome, in the last years of the Republic.

27. mane me = 'not so fast.'

The shortening of manē (cf. cavē, L. 18) has cast a doubt on this line. Emendations are: 'mane inquit' (Ellis); 'minime inquit' (Lachmann, &c.); 'mi anime' (Bergk); and 'memini inquit' (Munro).

28. istud . . . ratio = 'as for that matter which I said I had, I was not thinking'; istud = octo homines, cf. v. 14, quod illic natum dicitur esse.

Munro makes quod a conjunction: 'when I said just now that I had them.' Ellis makes istud and quod refer to the words me habere: 'as for what I happened to say, i.e. that I had them.'

29. 'A dear friend of mine is Caius Cinna, he it was bought them for himself. But whether things are his or mine, is all one to me—I use them as freely as if I have bought for myself.' Quam seems to = quam si, of which there is no other example. But it is philologically possible, the verbal termination containing the idea of supposition, which the particle only supplements, cf. (with Ellis) velut and tanquam without si; and the introduction of bene need make no theoretical difference: Munro (emending to paratis, i.e. neut. abl. plu. of participle), objects that the proper tense after si (expressed or omitted) would be parassem. But modifications of the conventional forms of conditional sentences are common both in Greek and Latin syntax, accompanied of course by modifications of meaning. There is surely no solecism in saying utor tanquam paraverim = 'I use as if I have bought them,' referring to the joint property of Catullus and Cinna, and leaving the fact of the former having purchased any special part as unindicated as it was left by the friends.

Cinna Caius. xcv. Note the poetical inversion of the names and cf. Marrucine Asini, XII. 1, Crispe Sallusti, Horace Od. I. vi. 1, &c.

33. 'But you are a wretched dunce and a plague, for refusing to admit a slip of the tongue.' Male sometimes = 'very,' but only with words of negative meaning: see Horace's male dispari, Od. I. xvii. 25; male parvus, Sat. I. iii. 45, &c. With words of positive meaning male = parum, as digito male pertinaci, Hor. Od. I. xi. 24; male fida, Verg. Aen. II. 25; male sanus, &c.

XI.

1. Catullus begs his acquaintances, Furius and Aurelius (xv., xvi., xxi., xxiii., xxvi.), who have sworn eternal inseparable friendship with him, to do him a little service, and carry to Lesbia his final repudiation of her. He is embittered by her infidelity, and this explains the half ironical tone of his address to his friends, which suggests a doubt of their faith too. This is evidently, from its allusions, one of Catullus' latest poems; for Caesar did not go to Britain till 55 B.C. The difference between the treatment of the Sapphic metre by Catullus and Horace is shown in Appendix I.

comites C., 'pledged to be Catullus' comrades.'

3. 'Where, waking far-off echoes, the oriental wave buffets the shore.'

ut = 'where,' a rare but undoubted usage. Cf. xvii. 10:

'*Verum totius ut lacus putidaeque paludis
Lividissima maximeque est profunda vorago.*'

So Verg. Aen. XII. 270 (cf. v. 329):

'Hasta volans ut forte novem pulcerrima fratrum Corpora constiterant contra.'

ὤς, identical in origin and form with ut, has in later Doric the same meaning: Theocr. I. 13, v. 101.

5. Hyrchanos, living S.E. of the Caspian, called also mare Hyrcanum.

6. Sacas = Scythians of the East.

7. colorat aequora = covers the plains with his dark slime, 'floods and darkens the plains.'

9. gradietur, i.e., on foot, 'march.'

10. 'Viewing the scenes that bear the impress of great Caesar.'

11. horribiles, 'inhuman.'

ultimos, 'world's-end.'

As this verse seems unmetrical (quæ ulti- being a rather startling hiatus), various emendations have been offered, the best of which perhaps is 'horribilem insulam ulti-' (Ellis) which in MS. involves curiously little alteration. At the same time Munro's 'horribile aequor' is very attractive.

P. 7. 15. 'Carry to my lady a little message, couched in no pleasant terms.'

17. vivat valeatque, 'live and prosper,' a formula of repudiation.

18. sed identidem, 'but, one after the other, rupturing all.'

21. respectet, 'look back to find my love, as once she might,' i.e., when tired of her moechi. Ellis renders, 'look fondly back upon,' but this ignores the point of ut ante.

22. culpa, 'frailty,' like peccare, a special term in the Lover's Vocabulary: see Appendix II.

Catullus' bitterness is intensified by a delicacy of imagination and feeling, in strange combination with the fierce loathing coarseness of expression, by which it is accompanied.

24. ultimi prati = 'the skirt of the meadow.'

XII.

1. Asinius Marrucinus' only claim to immortality is his pilfering habit here stigmatised, for he is nowhere else mentioned. He was probably elder brother of G. Asinius Pollio, who justified Catullus' praise by becoming friend of Vergil and Horace, and eminent as soldier, senator, advocate, historian, and tragic dramatist: see Hor. Od. II. i.

Compare, on these petty thefts, xxv., Mart. XII. xxix.

Marr. Asini. Cf. x. 30 note.

sinistra = the thieving hand. Cf. XLVII. 1 :

'Porci et Socraton, duae sinistrae Pisonis.'

= the two left hands of (i.e., pilferers for) Piso. Compare Plaut. Pers. 'furtifica laeva.'

2. in joco, 'while we are deep in frolic and wine.'

lintea, 'cambrics.'

3. 'You think this brilliant! Blunderer, you are off the scent: it is an arrant shabby and unlovely action.' Quamvis goes with sordida.

7-9. 'Who would sink a whole talent to have your felonies compounded; for he is a boy of fluent wit and humour.'

leporum disertus puer, a rare usage.

A genitive of quality may be used when the substantive expressing the quality is accompanied by an adjective. Thus we can say munus maximi risus (XVII. 7), centum puer artium (Hor. Od. IV. i. 15) litus amoeni secessus (Juv. III. 4). But we may not say munus risus, puer artium, litus secessus. It seems, however, that if a substantive be attended by an adjective (as puer by disertus here) a simple genitive of quality is allowable, though very uncommon. Thus in Verg. Ecl. IV. 24, we have 'fallax herba veneni.' The whole phrase may then be said to weld itself together, as 'treacherously poisonous herb,' 'fluently witty boy.' The same rules apply to the ablative as to the genitive of description; and in the same way we have an apparent exception in Cat. LXIV. 50 (see note), and another from Virgil.

Ellis, however, makes leporum directly follow disertus = 'fluent,' or perhaps 'discerning, in matters of wit and fun'—apparently a kind of genitive of respect. There is no other such example.

14. Saetaba, 'of Saetabus' (Alcoy), in Hispania Tarraconensis, famous in Roman times for flax.

Hibere, abl. of Hiber = 'Ebro-country,' unnecessarily corrected to Hiberis = 'Spaniards.'

XIII.

P. 8. 2. 'In the course, if the gods befriend you, of a few days.'

5. 'Sunny maiden and wine and wit and funds of laughter.'

6. venuste noster = 'as you are our model of taste.'

9. meros amores, 'the essence of delight.' Cf. Mart. xiv. ccvi.,

'Collo nocte puer meros amores
Ceston de Veneris sinu calentem.'

10. seu quid, 'or a something, if there be such, still more fragrant and exquisite.' Cf. XXII. 13, LXXXII:

'Quinti, si tibi vis oculos debere Catullum
Aut aliud si quid carius est oculis,
Eripere ei noli, multo quod carius illi
Est oculis seu quid carius est oculis.'

11. 'I will give you a balsam, vouchsafed to my lady by the Loves and Joys: once you smell it, you will pray the gods to turn you wholly into nose.'

totum agrees with te, but is adverbial in sense, a common Latin construction. Cf. Cic. ad Fam. xv. 7, 'sum totus vester,' and Hor. Sat. i. ix. 2:

'Nescio quid meditam nugarum, totus in illis.'

XIV.

Caius Licinius Macer Calvus was born 82 B.C., and, like Catullus, in company with whom he is often mentioned by Augustan writers as an epigrammatist and erotic poet, died young. He was, according to Cicero and Quintilian, an orator of great promise, his impeachment of Vatinius being especially famous. His vehemence was so striking 'ut in media ejus actione surgeret Vatinius reus et exclamaret "rogo vos, judices, num, si iste disertus est, ideo me damnari oportet?"' (Seneca, Controv. vii. 19). Compare LIII. I. and xcvi. are addressed to him, and perhaps lv.

1. jucundissime, 'most genial.' Cf. L. 16, IX. 9.

munere isto, 'for your wicked present.' If at the Saturnalia, the Roman equivalent (if not the origin) of our Christmas festivity, you received a book as a present, you were bound by etiquette to read it.

3. odio Vatiniano = 'as Vatinus hates you,' 'with all the spleen of Vatinus.' Ellis prefers an allusion to Vatinus' notorious unpopularity; if this is meant, render 'as Vatinus is hated.'

5. 'that you should wilfully poison me with such a dose of poets.'

7. impiorum, 'this heap of outcasts' who write dis invitis.

8. 'But if, as I shrewdly guess, this original and exquisite offering is a gift to you from the pedant Sulla.'

dat = dedit. Cf. Verg. Aen. IX. 266:

'Cratera antiquum, quem dat Sidonia Dido.'

10. est mi male beate. Cf. X. 18, XXIII. 5, XXXVIII.

12. 'portentous and predestinate volume.'

P. 9. 13. tu scilicet, 'you of course felt bound to send,' or (less well) 'you of all men sent.'

14. misti, so promisti CX. 3, luxi LXVI. 21, dux XCI. 9, subrepsti LXXVII. 3, abstersti XCIX. 8, accestis, Verg. Aen. I. 201. Cf. IV. 606, 682, V. 786, VI. 57, XI. 118. Compare tristi, LXVI. 30, where however the syllable contracted is -vis, not -sis.

continuo, 'forthwith.' Ellis compares, however, Ov. Fasti. v. 734, VI. 720, where 'continua die,' 'continua nocte,' = 'next day,' 'next night.' If continuo die be taken in the same way here, the present must have come on the eve of the Saturnalia, and this would certainly agree with v. 17, si luxerit.

16. non hoc sic abibit = 'this shall not pass without consequences,' 'shall not end where it stands.' Cf. 'mirabar hoc si sic abiret,' Ter. And. II. i. 4. 'Nisi facient quae illos aequum est, haud sic auferent,' Adelphi III. iv. 8. Cf. Cic. Att. XIV. i. 1, de Fin. v. iii. 7

17. si luxerit, 'with the first streak of dawn.' Si with 2nd Fut. = simul atque. Cf. Verg. Aen v. 64:

*'Praeterea si nona diem mortalibus alnum
Aurora extulerit radiisque retexerit orbem,'* and Cic. Phil. xiv. ii. 6, 'Ad literas veniam si pauca ante, quae ad ipsas literas pertineant, dixero.' librariorum scrinia, 'the copyists' (or publishers') book-cases.'

18. Aquinus = probably the poetaster of Cicero, Tusc. v. xxii, 'Adhuc neminem cognovi poetam (et mihi fuit cum Aquinio amicitia) qui sibi non optimus videretur.'

19. Suffenum. xxii. Munro says this is genitive plural, after omnia venena; but these words are better taken as a summary, 'every literary drug.' A bad book was 'poison' to Catullus. Cf. XLIV. 10 to end.

20. remunerabor, 'return your present in kind.'

21. Cf. xxvii. 5, xxxvi. 18.

22. 'Away to the regions whence you brought your bad feet.' Malum pedem alludes to the faulty measure of the poems, as well as their unwelcome appearance.

Three verses, the fragment of another poem (cf. II. 11-13 note) here follow in the MSS.:

*'Si qui forte mearum ineptiarum
Lectores eritis manusque vestras
Non horrebitis admovere nobis.'*

XVII.

1. The metre is Priapean. See Appendix I.

ludere, 'celebrate your games.' We hear of annual celebrations at Rome on the pons Sublicius, from which figures of men, made of rushes, were thrown down.

2. paratam habes. Cf. LX. 5, contemptam haberes, the beginning of the analytic perfect, used also by Cicero, but always, as yet, specially emphatic.

sed, &c., 'but in dread of the crazy shanks of that miserable structure, propped on its poor posts that have done other service, lest it turn on its back and find a bed in the depths of the swamp.'

3. axulis, diminutive of axis = round post. The vulgate assulis = laths.

redivivis, used especially of old building material that is employed again, 'resurrected.' Cf. Cic. Ver. i. 56, lapide redivivo.

5. sic, see Hor. Od. i. iii. 1. 'On one condition may you get a bridge good enough to satisfy your wildest longings, on which the orgies of the leaping god himself may be solemnised.'

6. Salisubsalii, said to be a name of Mars, who was served by dancing priests (Salii). Hercules had also Salii.

7. munus maximi risus, see XII. 11 note.

10. Verum, 'only,' 'only let it be where the whole fen and pool of corruption provides the bluest and deepest slough,' the strong smell of which is intended to wake him from his torpor. For ut = where, cf. XI. 3 note.

12. nec sapit, 'has not as much sense as a babe of two years, rocked asleep on its father's elbow.'

14. viridissimo flore, 'in her spring's freshest green.'

15. et = 'what is more,' so used with a repeated word; but may be used without such repetition. Cf. 'timeo Danaos et dona ferentes' = 'I fear the Greeks, and, still more, when they bring gifts.'

17. uni = unius: see Ellis' note.

P. 10. 18. 'Never rousing himself to his duty, he lies as an alder lies in a ditch, hamstrung by the Ligurian axe, just as little awake to everything as if the world did not contain it.'

Nulla sit, 'as if it did not exist at all,' said of the alder. This agrees better with Talis, which resumes velut. It might, however, refer to puella, 'as if he had no wife at all.'

21. 'No better than that, yonder dullard of mine.'

24. 'In the hope that he may startle his blank lethargy by the shock, and cast his sluggish spirit in the clogging mire.'

soleam, 'sock,' made of leather, but with an iron sole—the part left behind in the mud.

pote = possit. Cf. XLV. 5, LXVII. 11, LXXXVI. 16. For the lengthening before a double consonant, cf. XXII. 12, XLIV. 18, LXIII. 53, and Appendix I.

XXII.

The metre is Choliambic or Scazon, Appendix I.

1. probe = 'well enough.'

2. venustus, dicax, urbanus, 'of taste and wit, and with the tone of town.'

4. aut decem aut plura = 'if not ten thousand, then more.'

5. perscripta = fairly copied out.

palimpsesto relata, 'not vulgarly entered on twice-scoured parchment (or paper).'

palimpsesto. The ordinary construction is with the accusative, and Baehrens emends to palimpsestos.

6. 'Royal sheets, virgin volumes and virgin finials, scarlet leathers, parchment wrappers, and everything pencil-ruled and pumice-planed.'

Sheets (cartae) were made of strips of papyrus rind pressed together, and of course were of more than one quality. Several sheets were united to form a long narrow 'liber,' which was provided with a wooden cylinder, round which it was rolled for convenience of stowage and carriage, and from which it was gradually unrolled by the reader. This roller (umbilicus) had projecting ends (also called umbilici), shaped like horns or bosses. The lora were strips of leather hanging from the rolled volumes, and containing the titles of the books; or, more probably, they were bands employed to tie up the rolls. Membranae were envelopes of skin in which the books were kept, and were often coloured, answering to our leather bindings. Lines were ruled in lead to direct the writer, and pumice-stone was employed to remove all blots, errors, or irregularities in the writing, as well as to smooth all roughnesses, and finish the edges, both of the paper and of the parchment covering. Part of the membrana overlapped the top of the paper, and on it was sometimes written the title of the work. This may explain why any part of the membrana should have been ruled with lines, which Munro thinks was never the case. Compare the third and fourth lines of the following passage in Tibullus, a locus classicus:

‘*Lutea sed niveum involvat membrana libellum,
Pumex¹ cui canas tondeat ante comas,
Summaque praetexat tenuis vestigia cartae,
Indicet ut nomen litera facta tuum,
Atque inter geminas pingantur cornua frontes.*’

Here the frontes are the ends of the roll. Cf. also Mart. III. 10, Ovid. Trist. II. 1.

Ellis and other editors alter without occasion to membrana, but v. 8 refers summarily to all the portions of the book before mentioned. Munro would punctuate after membranae, and connect v. 8 with what follows; but haec more naturally begins the sentence.

‘9. haec cum legas ‘as often as you read these verses.’ Bellus, ‘fine and city-bred gentleman.’ Urbanus signifies the polished manners and lively talk of Rome, in contrast to the heaviness and dullness of the country.

10. unus, ‘ordinary,’ like unus e multis.

11. rursus = reversus: ‘drops to an ordinary ditcher: so unlike himself, so changed does he become.’

Abhorret, sc. a se = ‘so inconsistent with himself is he.’ Munro would take the word generally = ‘so absurd is he.’

mutat, intransitive.

12. scurra = ‘a practised wit,’ much like urbanus with which it is combined, Plaut. Most. I. i. 14:

‘*Tu urbanus vero scurra, deliciae populi,
Rus mihi tu objectas.*’ modō before sc., cf. XVII. 24.

13. tritius, ‘of finer grain’; or ‘more dexterous’ (cf. τριβων),—a rare and doubtful use. The MSS. read tristius, for which Ellis suggests ‘strictius = acutius vel argutius’; Munro tersius or tertius = ‘more polished.’

aut si quid. Cf. XIII. 10 note.

15. 'Yet, strange to say, he is never so near heaven as when he writes a poem.'

P. 11. 18. 'Of course we all deceive ourselves in the same way, and there is no man whom you may not see to be in some one point a Suffenus. We have all been given our private delusions; but we do not see what is in the back of the wallet.'

21. manticae = two bags tied together, and slung over the shoulder. In the first part we carry our neighbours' vices, our own in the half that hangs behind us. Cf. Phaedrus iv. 10.' It seems unnecessary to render 'that part of the wallet that is behind,' the simpler translation being 'that which is in the back of the wallet.'

XXV.

The metre is Iambic Tetrameter Catalectic, see Appendix I.

1. 'Emasculate Thallus, softer than rabbit's fur or goose's filmy marrow, or the tiny lobe of the tenderest ear or mould of cobwebs, and yet,' &c.

2. medullula is explained to mean the pith of the feather, or perhaps the down of the goose.

auricilla. Cf. Cic. Quin. Fr. II. 15, 'in inimicitiiis auricula infirma mollior.'

5. Of this verse there have been as many emendations as commentators. Instead of mulier aries (or the variants mulier aves or arios or alios) I would suggest famuliaricos,² or famularios, the extant readings having arisen from a gloss familiares. Compare Martial VIII. lix. 11 on the same subject, 'dormitantem vernam fraudare.' The sense would then be 'when the goddess exhibits the slaves in act of yawning,' a good chance for the pilferer of the cloak-room. Diva may

Propriis repletam vitiis post tergum dedit,
Alienis ante pectus suspendit gravem.
Hac re videre nostra mala non possumus ;
Alii simul delinquant, censores sumus.*

²Mr. Munro has kindly pointed out to me objections, which I consider fatal to this reading. I leave the suggestion, however, as an indication of what undoubtedly was the sense of the lost vera lectio.

then = Aurora or Luna; or even some one of the goddesses mentioned by Ellis.

He reads:

'Cum diva muta gaviās ostendit oscitantes,' translating 'when the silent goddess (either the goddess of thieves, Laverna or Larunda, or perhaps Angerona ἡ Θεὸς τῆς βουλῆς καὶ καιρῶν) shows you the gulls (the simpletons that indicate your presence, as sea-gulls indicate a storm) agape, and ready to be fooled and pilfered.'

Munro suggests:

'Cum diva Murcia atriis ostendit oscitantes'

= 'when the lazy goddess shows the people (servants) gaping in the hall.'

Lachmann reads 'munerarios' for mulierarios (L.) saying 'munerarius est qui munera dat vel invitus vel oscitanti rapta.' Munerarius, however, is found in no such sense. Haupt's mulierarios is near the MSS., but far from yielding a good meaning. The wider conjectural readings may be left to destroy one another.

7. sudarium Saetabum. See XII. 14 note.

catagraphosque Thynos = 'painted Bithynians'—on what they were depicted is unknown.

catagraphos has been taken as a substantive, in various senses, as meaning figured towels, or coloured tablets, signet-rings, or embossed knives.

8. habere, 'wear.' Cf. Lucret. i. 312:

'Annulus in digitis subter tenuatur habendo,' and Ovid. Amor. i. viii. 51:

'Aera nitent usu: vestis bona quaerit haberi.'

9. reglutina = 'un-lime'—the pilferer's nails were said to have some adhesive substance, like birdlime, upon them, to assist his thefts.

10. conscribillent. Cf. Plaut. Pseud. i. v. 31:

'Quasi cum in libro scribuntur calamo litterae, Stilis me totum usque ulmeis conscribito.'

See Iliad iv. 139, ἐπιγράφειν χροά, xi. 388 ἐπιγρ. ταρσόν ποδός.

inusta. Hor. Epist. i. xvi. 46, 'loris non ureris.'

'Lest all over your silken silly side and tiny tender hands the branding lashes write in little letters the story of your disgrace.'

For the use of diminutives in Catullus see Appendix II.

12. insolenter, 'in a way new to you.'

13. deprensa, 'caught by a gale.'

XXVI.

1. nostra. Many editors, on the authority of one good MS., read vestra.

'Due on my little homestead falls, Furius, not the blast of the south wind, . . . but a bill of 15,200 HS.'

2. opposita est = 'is mortgaged for' and 'faces towards.'

The point of the piece lies in the pun on these two meanings of opponere. Cf. Juvenal xi. 18, 'lancibus oppositis;' Ter. Phorm. 161, 'ager oppositust pignori decem ob minas.'

3. Apheliotae, 'east wind,' Latin subsolanus (Seneca Q. N. v. 16), Favonio contrarius (Pliny H. N. ii. 122).

horridum, 'shrivelling.'

XXVII.

1. 'Young steward of old Falernian wine.'

2. inger = ingere, 'pour in.' Ellis quotes Mart. viii. xlv. 9, conger.

calices amariores, 'more acrid,' 'of sharper flavour.'

P. 12. 3. 'As the law of our sovereign, Postumia, bids.'

magistrae. At a Roman wine-party one of the company was chosen magister bibendi, or lord of the revels, and his ruling on all points was absolute. Cf. Hor. Od. i. iv. 18:

'Nec regna vini sortiere talis,' and Sat. ii. vi. 67, where a president was dispensed with:

'prout cuique libido est,
Siccat inaequales calices conviva solutus
Legibus insanis.'

4. acino, 'grape-berry.'

5. quod jubet, 'for so she orders.' Others emend to quolubet.

6. 'Water, wine's undoing; and seek a home with melancholy. Here is the pure draught of the enthusiastic god.'

7. Thyonianus. Bacchus is said to be called Thyoneus, from Thyone, a name of his mother or his nurse. But the word has more probably a reference to the orgies of the god (θύω).

The original, which suggested this poem, is a fragment of Diphilus:

ἔγχεον σὺ δὲ πιεῖν.
Εὐζωρότερόν γε νῆ Δί', ὦ παῖ, δός· τὸ γὰρ ὑδαρες ἅπαν τοῦτ' ἐστὶ τῇ ψυχῇ κακόν.

XXX.

The metre is Choriambic, much used by Sappho and Alcaeus; see Appendix I. Alfenus is unknown, if he be not the Varus of X. Cf. LXIV. 133-150, for the matter.

1. Immemor, 'treacherous.' Such negatives have more force than a mere negation of the simple adjectives: so inutilis = positively 'harmful,' &c.

2. 'Has your hard heart so soon lost pity for your once cherished friend?'

3. dubitas, 'tremble.'

4. 'although treachery is irreligion, and finds no favour with the gods.' Hom. Od. xiv. 83:

οὐ μὲν σχέτλια ἔργα θεοὶ μάκαρες φιλέουσι.

nec = non. See Munro, Lucret. II. 23 note. Or nec = 'although . . . not.' Cf. Verg. Aen. I. 130, and infra, LXII. 29, LXIV. 85.

5. Quae, 'this truth.' Monro would read Quom, and connect this with the succeeding verse.

7. animam tradere, 'surrender my soul to you, cruel heart, luring me into love's perilous land by promises of perfect security.'

9. Idem, 'in spite of the past.'

10. 'suffering wind and airy rack to sweep into nothingness all you have said and done.' Cf. LXIV. 60, 143, &c.

11. at = 'nevertheless.' Cf. Aen. I. 542, &c.

12. postmodo, 'yet a little while and she will overwhelm you with remorse.'

XXXI.

1. Sirmio (Sermione) is a peninsula connected with the southern shore of the Lago di Garda by a narrow strip of land, which at times is covered by water.

insularumque, 'or islands. Cf. VII. 2 note.

2. Ocelle, L. 19. Cf. the use of ὄμμα (Æschyl. Eum. 1025), ὀφθαλμός (Pind. O. II. 18, VI. 27), and Cic. Attic. XIV. 6, 'ocellos Italiae meas villulas.'

quascunque, 'upborne (or begotten) in pellucid meres, or on the illimitable ocean, by either water-god'; i.e., the god of fresh water or of the sea.

5. Thyniam. Cf. Claud. in Eutrop. 247,

'Thyni Thraces erant, quae nunc Bithynia fertur.'

P. 13 7. 'Can there be a greater blessing than when the cords of care are snapped, and the mind lets slip its burden; when, spent with toil in far-off places, we come to our sanctuary at home, and find rest on the long-dreamed-of couch? This single moment repays all our pains.'

13. vosque. The que is placed with the pronominal subject, although that is not the first word in the clause, by a license found in Propert. III. 21, 16, quoted by Ellis, but very rare. Compare the Greek formula of address—title, pronoun, enclitic particle.

Lydiae. The Etruscans, anciently believed to be of Lydian origin, had settlements in early times in the neighbourhood of the Po.

We should rather expect Lydii lacus, but the hypallage is not uncommon when the adjective denotes a proper name. Compare Hor. Od. I. xxxi. 9, III. vi. 38; Proper. I. xx. 9; Verg. Aen. VIII. 526; Lucret. II. 501, v. 24. Many contures (such as Vividae, by Munro) have been proposed in place of Lydiae, but needlessly.

14. 'Let every merry sound with which home is haunted break into laughing.'

quicquid est cachinnorum. See Appendix II.

XXXIV.

The metre is composed of three Glyconic verses, and one Pherecratean. See Appendix I.

1. Dianae sumus in fide, 'Diana is our guardian, maidens and boys without blemish.'

The boys and maidens employed in religious ceremonies must be free from bodily or moral blemish, and must be patrimi matrimique, that is, have both father and mother still living. Cf. LXI. 36.

In fidem populi Romani venire (Caesar B. G. II. 13) = 'to come under Roman protection;' 'municipia in fide mea essent' (Cic. Planc. XLI. 97) = 'I am patron of the country towns.'

5. 'Child of Latona, cradled by thy mother near the Delian olive,' which rose to assist Latona in her travail.

deposivit. For archaic forms in Catullus see Appendix II.

11. saltuumque reconditorum, 'sequestered forest-lawns.'

13. 'Thou art invoked as Juno Lucina when young mothers are in pain; thou art invoked as the Magic Power of Meeting Ways, and as the Moon when thou shinest with counterfeit light.'

Compare Hor. Od. III. xxii.; and, for the whole poem, Hor. Od. I. xxi.

15. Trivia, the goddess of three meeting roads (τριοδῖτις).

potens = 'possessed of mysterious influence.'

notho. The moon's light is called 'bastard,' as not produced by herself, but reflected from the sun. Cf. Lucr. v. 575, 'Lunaque sive notho fertur loca lumine lustrans.'

17. cursu, 'measuring thy yearly path by monthly progress.'

P.14. 21. 'Hallowed be thou, by whatever name thou wilt.'

23. antique . . . es, 'as thou wert wont in the good old times.'

XXXV.

1. tenero, 'the poet of passion.'

3. novi. Comum in 59 B.C. received, under Caesar's conduct, a large accession of colonists.

4. Larium litus, 'the shore of Lake Larius.' Larius is used as an adjective. Cf. in Horace, 'Dardanae genti,' 'Metaurum flumen,' &c., and in Virgil (Aen. iv., 552), 'cineri Sychaeo.'

5. 'For I wish him to hear and welcome some premeditations of his friend and mine.' The amicus sui meique may be a common friend of Catullus and Caecilius, or, perhaps, may mean Catullus himself.

7. si sapiet, 'as sure as he is wise, he will press on his journey hotly.' Comp. 2nd Henry iv. act i. sc. 1, 'He seem'd in running to devour the way,' and 'corripuere viam,' Verg. Aen. i. 418, v. 145, 316.

11. si . . . nuntiantur, 'if the news I hear be true.'

12. deperit = 'dies of love for him.' Cf. XLV. 5.

impotente = 'that cannot restrain itself.' Cf. iv. 18, VIII. 9.

13. incohatam, 'his inauguration of the queen of Dindymus,' i.e., a poem begun upon this subject.

Dindymi dominam = Cybele, see LXIII. 1.

14. misella, 'love-sick.' Cf. XLV. 31.

15. medullam. Cf. XLV. 16. The marrow was thought to be the seat of the passion of love.

16. 'I pardon you, maiden, who prove yourself more poetical than the muse of Sappho.' Doctus at this time meant not learned generally, but possessed of poetical taste and culture.

XXXVI.

1. 'Chronicles of Volusius, polluted sheet, I call you to discharge a vow in my lady's name.'

Volusius may stand for Tanusius Geminus of Padua, known to have written a history. Cf. xcv. 7.

4. 'Should I be won back to her, and silence my volleys of scathing epigrams.'

P.15, 5. iambos. Cf. Hor. Od. i. xvi. 2, 'criminosis iambis.'

7. tardipedi deo = Vulcan, 'the halting deity' (ἀμφιγυῆις) = fire. Daturam without se: cf. XLII. 4.

8. infelicibus, 'faggots from an accursed tree.' Cf. Cic. Mil. 13, 'infelicibus lignis semiustulatus.'

9. 'And in this vow my lady saw that she, with merry wit, offered the worst of all things to the gods.' Nothing to Catullus was so vile as a bad poet's worst writings. The wit of Lesbia was shown, not merely in sacrificing the worst things to the gods, but in valuing so contemptuously a reconciliation with Catullus.

Other translations might be given: (α), 'the sweet sinner (pessima puella) saw that this (i.e., Annales Volusi) was the sacrifice she promised, in her flash of frolic, to the gods'; (β), 'this vow to the gods my wicked lady knew to be merry and witty.' But (α) would require haec; and both (α) and (β) would harshly give to pessimi and pessima different meanings.

11. 'Therefore hear now, thou fruit of dark ocean, whose spirit haunts hallowed Idalium' (a grove in Cyprus) 'and Urii, wide of prospect' (near Brundisium), 'and Ancon' (in Picenum), 'and reedy Cnidos' (a city of Caria), 'and Amathus and Golgi' (cities of Cyprus), 'and Dyrrhachium' (formerly Epidamnus), 'the hostel of the Adriatic; grant an acceptance and quittance of the vow, as surely as it is neither dull nor in bad grace.'

18. interea, 'while my prayer rises.'

19. pleni ruris, 'full of rusticity and plentifully lacking wit.' Cf. xxii. 14, 'infaceto infacetiore rure.'

XXXVIII.

1. 'Your friend, Cornificius, is ill, heaven knows how ill, and in what pain, and growing daily, hourly, worse.' Cornificius is probably the contemporary erotic poet of that name.

4. 'Yet, least and easiest duty, with what word of sympathy have you comforted him?'

6. Sic meos amores. 'To think that you, the object of my love, should act thus!' Ellis would render, 'to treat my passion thus!' But there is nothing here to show that Catullus' sickness arose from his passion for Lesbia, and meos amores must mean the 'object of my love.' The accusative is the regular construction with the indignant infinitive as in Cicero's 'Senatūmne servire populo,' &c.

7. paulum quidlibet. 'Send me any morsel of sympathy, and let it be sadder than the tears of Simonides,' the master of pathos. Quidlibet must be taken with paulum, 'a little word, as little as you please,' and may be used for quodlibet. Cf. Hor. A. P. 9:

'pictoribus atque poetis
Quidlibet audendi semper fuit aequa potestas.'

For the omission of the verb (da, or an equivalent) cf. LV. 10:

'Camerium mihi, pessimae puellae.'

XXXIX.

2. renidet usque quaque, 'he breaks into smiles at every step.'

P. 16. 4. si ad pli, &c. 'Visit the benches round a prisoner, when the advocate is drawing tears; visit a scene of mourning, by the pyre of a dutiful son, a lone mother weeping the loss of her sole hope; let the occasion, the place or his business be what it may, he grins, and has this habit to a disease.'

9. monendum te est mihi, 'I must have a word with you.' This construction, the nominative of the verbal noun retaining its power of governing a case, is rare. It occurs in Lucr. I. iii.:

'Aeternas quoniam poenas in morte timendum est,' and in six other passages of the same author; Verg. Aen. II. 230 (according to the best MSS.), 'pacem Trojano ab rege petendum'; Cic. de Sen. II., 'viam quam nobis quoque ingredi- endum sit.' Compare Plaut. Am. i. iii. 21, 'tibi hanc curatio est rem.'

10. urbanus, 'Roman bred.'

13. ut . . . attingam, 'to lay a finger on my own folk.'

14. puriter, 'who uses a clean dentifrice.' We have in Lucr. III. 676, &c., longiter; Id. III. 839, uniter; and naviter, Cic., Lucr., Liv. See Appendix II.

17. Celtiber = Κελτίβηρ.

18. Cf. xxxvii. 20. 'It is the custom for every man, on rising, to scrub tooth and coarse red gum with his last night's urine; hence, the finer the polish of your wonderful tooth, the more largely will it proclaim you to have drunk of lye.'

20. vester = tuus. See LXVIII B. 111 note.

XL.

1. 'Pray, lovesick Ravidus, what infatuation drives you down the steep upon my epigrams?' Ravide may have been pronounced Raude, or the verse is hypermetrical, or the e is elided before the initial vowel of v.

miselle. Cf. XLV. 31.

3. 'What god, better left uninvoked by you, makes haste to fire the frantic duel?'

5. pervenias in ora, 'force your way to the lips of men,' 'become a subject of common talk.' Cf. Ennius' 'volitare per ora virum.'

6. qualibet, 'at any cost.'

8. cum longa poena, 'since you have chosen to love my love and be gibbeted for ever.'

meos amores, not Lesbia, but Juventius or some other boy love. Cf. xv.

XLIII.

P. 17. 1. salve, 'my service to you.'

puella = Ameana, 'Ista turpiculo puella naso,' xli. 3.

3. longis, 'tapering.'

4. 'Nor (to deal plainly) too refined a tongue.'

5. 'Mistress of the fraudulent bankrupt of Formiae,' that is, Mamurra, Caesar's praefectus fabrum in Gaul, and the object of Catullus' especial hatred. Cf. XXIX. and CXIV. note.

decoctoris. So Cic. Phil. II. 18, decoxisse = 'to run through one's property and become bankrupt.'

6. provincia, 'Provence.'

8. 'O tasteless, lackwit generation.'

XLIV.

1. seu Sabine seu Tiburs, 'whether your title be Sabine or Tiburtine.' Sabine is an instance of very rare attraction, that of a predicative adjective to the vocative case, made perhaps easier here by the omission of the substantive verb. Cf. Theocr. XVII. 66, ὄλβιε, κῶρε, γένοιο, and (probably) macte tua virtute puer: so, sic venias hodie. Such passages as Verg. Aen. II. 282, 'Quibus Hector ab oris Expectate venis?' are not parallel, as the epithet does not contain the main predication. Tibur, twenty miles from Rome, was a fashionable locality at this time, much more esteemed than the neighbouring Sabine district, and is praised by Horace, Od. I. vii. 13, I. xviii. 2, II. vi. 5, IV. iii. 10. There the great, such as Maecenas, Sallust, Quintilius Varus, had their villas; and Catullus confesses his desire for the vanity of a fashionable address.

2. 'Tiburtine they swear you, who have no heart to hurt my feelings, but those who have the heart protest under any forfeit that you are Sabine.'

3. cordi, a locative, 'at heart.'

7. 'And cleared my chest of a villainous cough, which—serve me right—my belly made me catch, while I was hankering after profuse dinners.'

expuli is nearer the MSS. than expui.

9. dedit comes before its time, as gemunt in LXVI. 18, 'non ita me divi, vera gemunt, juerint.' Cf. LXVIII B. 28, 108. This is said to be an Alexandrine trick; but see Munro on Lucr. III. 843.

10. Sestianus conviva, 'to dine with Sestius.' Cicero speaks of the absurdities of 'dicta Sestiana' (ad D. VII. 32), and uses his name as a term of literary condemnation (ad Att. VII. 17, 'nihil unquam legi scriptum σηστιωδέστερον').

11. petitorem, 'prosecutor' in a suit, or 'candidate' at an election.

12. veneni. Cf. XIV. 19.

13. gravedo tussis, 'a freezing catarrh and fits of coughing convulsed me.'

15. 'nursed my self well with rest and infusion of nettles.'

17. ulta. Catullus is now addressing the villa.

18. deprecor, 'cry mercy,' 'plead.'

nefariā. For metre see XIV. 14.

19. recepso, 'shall find house-room for.' For the form, answering to the Greek sigmatic future, see Roby L. G. § 619.

P. 18. 20. frigus, the 'icy breath' of bad style.

21. 'Who only invites me when I have read a villainous book.'

XLV.

Of this poem it need only be said that it is the most perfect of all love-poems:

*'quot aut fuerunt,
Aut sunt aut aliis erunt in annis.'*

See General Introduction II.

3. perdite amo, 'lost in love of you,' 'love consumedly.'

amare porro, 'love on.'

4. assidue, 'devotedly,' 'unchangeably.'

5. quantum qui pote plurimum perire., qui=quis, 'any one.' ὅσον τις οἶός τε ἐστὶ τὰ μάλιστα φιλήσαι, 'as deeply as the deepest devotion possible.' Cf. Verg. Aen. VI. 140:

*'Sed non ante datur telluris opera subire
Auricomos quam qui decerpserit arbore fetus.'*

It is possible, however, to supply pote before qui (relative), 'as much as he can love who can love the most.'

perire, 'to love to distraction' = perdite amare, and is found with a simple accusative in Plautus Truc.:

'Tres unam pereunt adolescentes mulierem.'

Add. Poen. iv. 2, 135, and cf. deperit in Catullus xxxv. 12, c. 2. The common construction is with the ablative. Cf. Prop. III. 6, 13:

'Ipse Paris nuda fertur periisse Lacaena.'

6. Indiaque, 'or in parched India.' Cf. VII. 2 note.

7. caesio, 'green-eyed.'

8-9. sinistra, 'Love, standing on the left, as before, sneezed towards the right his blessing.' The words ut ante, while appropriate in v. 17, seem awkward here, and are perhaps corrupt. Indeed the MSS. vary much in the reading of the whole sentence. Many commentators take sinistra ut ante together, 'as he had done before on the left'; supposing the passion of the lovers to have hitherto wanted the god's full approval. Sneezing has been regarded as ominous from the earliest times, and the omen so given variously interpreted. The difficulty of the present passage is increased by our ignorance of the Roman interpretations. Was a sneeze absolutely lucky, or only when occurring on a particular side? On what side, then? Or was a sneeze, heard first on the left and then on the right, the best sign? The last seems the case from the present poem. Perhaps, however, dextram means no more than 'favourable' (as in Verg. Aen. iv. 294), the left side being the lucky side in Roman superstition, and the play on the word being characteristic of popular adages and mysterious maxims.

For the cognate accusative approbationem, cf. Prop. II. 3, 23:

'Aureus argutum sternuit omen Amor.'

10. reflectens = bending back her head, so as to lift her face from his bosom.

11. ebrios, 'brimming,' 'love-laden.' Cf. Anacr. μεθύων ἔρωτι.

13. Sic. Cf. XVII. 5. 'So surely may we be constant slaves of this our one Sovereign Lord, as it is sure that in my molten marrow glows a far greater and far fiercer fire.'

mea vita. Cf. LXVIII B. 115.

20. mutuis, 'their souls respond, with love for love.'

21. misellus, xxxv. 14.

22. Syrias. The plural generalizes, 'than all your Syrias,' or 'than any Syria,' without meaning that more than one Syria (though that would be true) exists. Cf. Hor. Od. i. xiv. 7:

' Vix durare carinae
Possint imperiosius
Aequor '

= 'scarce could any keel' (or 'no keel could') 'endure the tyranny of that sea.'

For the thought compare Hor. Od. iii. ix. 1:

' Donec gratus eram tibi
Persarum vigui rege beatior. '

23. 'With Septimius alone loyal Acme yields to pleasure and to passion.'

26. auspicatorem, 'more happily heralded,' 'born under a brighter star.'

XLVI.

P. 19. 1. egelidos tepores, 'unfrozen warmths.' In Verg. Aen. viii. 610:

' Natumque in valle reducta
Ut procul egelido secretum flumine vidit. ' egelidus is said to mean 'very cold' (cf. edurus); there is, however, a variant 'et gelido.' Ovid uses the word like Catullus (Amor. ii. xi. 10):

' Et gelidum Borean egelidumque Notum. '

2. 'At last heaven's equinoctial roar sinks into stillness before the genial breezes of the west.'

4. campi, 'table-lands.' Cf. xxxi. 6.

5. 'Sultry Nicaea's teeming tilth.'

7. 'Surprised by joy, my soul is impatient to be free, my feet quicken with glad enthusiasm.'

8. coetus, 'unions.'

9. 'Who have travelled far from home together, but must return by widely parted, widely different ways.'

longe with profectos.

10. diversae = 'taking different directions;' variae = some wholly by sea, some partly by land, &c.

XLVII.

Catullus' friends, Verannius and Fabullus (IX., XII., XIII.), served together in Spain, and afterwards in Macedonia under L. Piso Caesoninus, whom Cicero prosecuted. They returned with empty pockets (XXVIII.), while creatures like Porcius and Socraton were allowed by the governor to come back with fortunes, collected by rapine.

1. sinistrae, XII. 1 note. Heaving

2. scabies famesque mundi, 'murrain and lean kine of the world.'

4. 'Has that lustful lecher set you higher?'

5. lauta, 'fashionable.'

6. de die, 'before the business day was over.'

To begin festivities so early was a sign of prodigality; and also of debauchery, as they might thus be of longer duration. Cf. Terence Adelph. v. 9, 'apparare de die convivium;' Hor. Od. I. i., 'partem solido demere de die.'

7. 'Stand at the crossways to catch invitations.'

XLIX.

To discover the secret meanings of this little poem, it has been broken by the critics like a butterfly on the wheel. Cicero on some occasion, now quite unknown, has used his legal eloquence to Catullus' satisfaction; is thanked by him in a playful address; and that is all. To find here sarcasm, and an imitation of Cicero's style, and a logical sophism, is an occupation 'λίαν δεινὸν καὶ ἐπιπόνον καὶ οὐ πάνυ εὐτυχὸς ἀνδρός.'

1. disert., 'most eloquent.'

2. quot sunt, &c. Variations of this phrase are found in XXI. 2, XXIV. 2.

7. patronus, 'advocate.' Cicero was especially sought as counsel for the defence (Epis. ad Fam. VII. 1).

P. 20. 1. Licini, XIV. 1 note.

otiosi, 'in an idle mood.'

2. lusimus, 'we toyed with verse.' Ludere = to compose light poems, especially love poems: cf. LXVIII. 17, multa satis lusi, LXI. 228; so Hor. Od. I. xxxii:

'Poscimus; si quid vacui sub umbra
Lusimus tecum.'

3. ut convenerat esse delicatos, 'since we had sworn ourselves to frolic.' Convenerat = 'a compact had been arranged between us': in this impersonal construction inter is generally used with the names of the contracting parties or pronouns. Delicatus is used of light, frivolous, or lascivious conversation: cf. Cic. de Off. I. 40, 'turpe est in re severa delicatum inferre sermonem.'

5. numero, 'measure.'

6. reddens mutua, lit. 'paying our debts to one another,' 'retaliating.'

per jocum atque vinum = making our answers 'while we jested and drank,' or 'in the shape of a jest or a challenge to drink.'

8. incensus, 'fired by your brilliance and humour.'

9. 'Food failed to give pleasure to my poor body, and the peace of sleep to lap my eyes.'

11. 'Ungovernable in my delirium, I tossed over the whole bed.'

13. simulque ut essem, 'or at least be with you.'

14. labore, 'torment.'

15. lectulo, 'my poor bed.'

16. jucunde. Cf. XIV. 2.

18. cave. Cf. x. 27, manē. Servius on fervēre (Verg. Aen. iv. 409) says there existed cavēre as well as cavēre. Cave in ordinary conversation was pronounced in such a manner, that Caunias could be mistaken for cave ne eas; but here it must be dissyllabic. See Appendix I. 'Cautum, i.e. cautum,' is no evidence for the existence of cavēre (as Ellis seems to say), unless monitum proves a monēre to have existed.

19. despuas, 'void your rheum against' = 'scornfully reject,' or 'turn from.'

ocelle, XXXI. 2, 'my star.'

20. reponat, 'get me back satisfaction at your cost.' Most editions, but not many MSS., read 'reposcat.'

21. vemens, 'impetuous,' for the form cf. vecors. Cf. VII. 10 note.

LI.

This is a translation, or adaptation, probably fragmentary, of a poem of Sappho, which is confessedly incomplete as we now have it. The original is as follows :

φαίνεται μοι κῆνος ἴσος θεοῖσιν ἔμμεν ὤνηρ, ὅστις ἐναντίος τοι ἰζάνει καὶ πλασίον ἀδὺν φωνείσας ὑπακούει καὶ γέλαισας ἱμερόεν· τό μοι μάν καρδίαν ἐν στήθεσιν ἐπτόασεν.
 † ὥς γὰρ σ' ἴδω βροχέως με φώνας οὐδὲν ἔτ' εἴκει.
 ἀλλὰ καμ μὲν γλῶσσα ἔαγε, λέπτον δ' αὐτίκα χρῶ πῦρ ὑποδεδρόμακεν ὀππάτεσσι δ' οὐδὲν ὄρημ', ἐπιρρόμβεισι δ' ἄκουαι, ἀ δὲ ἰδρῶς κακχέεται, τρόμος δέ πᾶσαν ἄγρει, χλωροτέρα δὲ ποίας ἔμμι, τεθνάκην δ' ὀλίγῳ 'πιδέυην φαίνομαι.

As a translation Catullus' poem has been much overpraised. Even his simplicity seem 'elaborate beside the Greek: for instance, *gemma*¹ teguntur lumina nocte is artificial compared with ὀππότεσσιν δ' οὐδὲν ὄρημα. The whole of v. 2, identidem, spectat, misero, sonitu suopte are superfluous. There is an omission of ἀδὸν φωνέσας and of αὐτικά, both important. Omnes eripit sensus, torpet and sub artus are inadequate renderings.

On the versification, see Appendix I.

2. si fas est, 'if religion allow.'

divos, 'the great gods.'

3. identidem, 'again and again.'

5. dulce ridentem, 'the music of your laughter.' For the construction, see LXI. 8 note, 215, LXIII. 24. Compare Hor. Od. I. xxii. 24:

'Dulce ridentem Lalagen amabo
Dulce loquentem.'

misero, &c., 'Oh! it ravishes all my senses from me. Let me but look on you, Lesbia, nothing of me survives. My tongue is frozen; films of fire filter to the depths of my frame; sounds, not of the air, chime in my ears; and a double night closes over my eyes.'

P. 21. 7. Nihil est super mi. The last feet of the stanza are wanting, and are variously supplied from conjecture, in accordance with the Greek. As the text stands, it must be translated in some such way as the above, est super being taken as superest.

9. torpet. Compare Hor. Od. iv. i. 35:

'Cur parum decoro
Inter verba cadit lingua silentio?'

10. suopte ('suo-p-te'='quite their own') is an archaic form.

11. tintinant. This verb and its derivatives elsewhere have the second syllable long.

13-16. This stanza is probably, although thoroughly Sapphic in form, a fragment of another poem, accidentally attached to the preceding. See note on II. 11-13. The sentiment is in emori = 'to die and be done,' 'why delay the end-all, death?'

2. struma, 'scrofulous.' Nonius is unknown.

3. per consulatum. 'Vatinius swears false oaths by his consulship.' Vatinius was not consul till 47 B.C., and it is probable that Catullus died about 54 B.C. Cicero, however, tells us, as early as 56 B.C., that Vatinius was always bragging of his coming consulate; and it must therefore be to this confident anticipation of office by Vatinius that Catullus refers.

corona = the ring, or crowd of hearers. Vergil uses the verb in the sense of forming a cordon of troops (Aen. ix. 380):

3. crimina explicasset, 'had unfolded to a miracle his denunciations of Vatinius.' Cf. XIV. 2 note.

P. 22. This song is written for the celebration of the marriage of Catullus' friend, Manlius Torquatus, with Vinia Aurunculeia. Continuous rapid music characterizes this 'chorus hymeneal,' as it characterizes the Attis. The verse is of the lightest texture known to Latin poetry. The invocation of the deity, the welcome to the bride, the assurance of a happy future, and the adieu, are full of delicate imagination, simply and gracefully expressed. The whole is unique in Latin, if not in all literature.

The Roman marriage rites took place in the evening. A lucky¹ day was chosen both with reference to the calendar, that it might not be a day marked there as black, nor the eve of a black day, and also after consultation of the auspices.² When the happy day had arrived, and drew near its close, a feast was prepared in the house of the bridegroom, who awaited³ there the arrival of his bride. His doors were hung with garlands of flowers, and before them stood a quire of virgins,⁴ and of boys carrying torches.⁵ While they sang an invocation to the god and praises of the estate of marriage, the bride (who might be a child scarcely more than twelve years of age)⁶ had been dressed in the wedding raiment at her own home. She wore a long white robe with a purple fringe, bound round the waist by a girdle (which was to be formally untied by the husband),⁷ a bright yellow veil,⁸ and shoes of the same colour.⁹ Her hair was parted with a spear point, and she was then taken from her mother's arms with a little show of force.¹⁰ Preceded by a boy dressed in the praetexta, carrying a torch, her arms held by two other boys, who wore similar robes,¹¹ she was led in procession to her future home. As she approached she was welcomed by the chorus,¹ and lifted over the threshold²—having previously anointed the posts, and wound them round with wool—by the pronubi, who were men that were ‘husbands of one woman.’ She was received by her husband, solemnly touched fire and water, saluted her lord with the words, ubi tu Caius ego Caia, and then took the keys of the house, of which she was now the mistress.³ After the banquet, the bride was conducted towards the nuptial couch by the praetextatus, who, loosing her arm, delivered her to the pronubae (women but once married, or univirae), and they laid her in the bed.⁴ The husband⁵ then passed into the chamber, attended by the congratulations and good wishes of the chorus. They closed the door, sang an adieu, and the ceremonial was complete.

Though this Epithalamium is Greek in form and in metre (see Appendix I.), we have seen that it presents a marriage scene distinctively Roman. In this respect it differs from the following poem, which might be a literal translation from a Greek original.

The bridegroom, Manlius Torquatus, to whom LXVIII A. is addressed, was probably the friend of Cicero, L. Manlius Torquatus, who is made to take part in the dialogue De Finibus. From LXVIII A. 5, it would seem⁶ that the bride, Vinia Aurunculeia, died soon after her marriage, and left her husband to inconsolable grief. He fell in battle in Africa, 46 B.C.

For the metre see Appendix I.

36. integrae. Cf. xxxiv. 2 note.

38. par dies, 'for whom as high a day is on the wing.'

in modum, 'to our rhythm'; or, 'to my beat': cf. Hor. Od. iv. vi. 33-36, 41-44.

*' Deliae tutela deae, fugaces
Lyncas et cervos cohibentis arcu
Lesbium servate pedem meique
Pollicis ictum.
Nupta jam dices: ego dis amicum
Saeculo festas referente luces
Reddidi carmen, docilis modorum Vatis Horati.'*

43. munus, 'prerogative.'

44. 'forerunner of gracious passion, uniter of gracious love.'

conjugator only occurs here.

46. anxiis, 'heart-sick lovers.' So Ellis reads for MSS. amatis. Perhaps we might read 'mage amabilis.'

51. tremulus, 'the palsied sire.' Cf. 161.

53. zonula soluunt sinus, 'free the folds of their robe from the soft girdle.' Cf. II. 13 note.

54. timens cupida, 'with ears where hope belies fear.' Remark the collocation.

56. fero, 'passionate.'

in manus refers to the conventio uxoris in manum viri, by which the husband acquired supreme authority over the wife.

57. floridam, 'in her bloom.'

P. 24. 61. 'Passion can find no fruit, fit to be sanctioned by good report, without thy aid ; but is enabled by thy grace. What god can be likened unto our god ?'

65. compararier. For the archaic forms in Catullus see Appendix II.

68. stirpe vincier, 'be outstripped by his children,' i.e., be blest with a constantly improving posterity. But this is not a common Roman sentiment. Compare, however, Statius Sat. iv. 4, 74:

'Surge agetum juvenemque puer deprinde parentem' quoted by Ellis, and the boast of Diomedé :

ἡμεῖς τοι πατέρων μέγ' ἀμείνονες εὐχόμεθ' εἶναι.

Avantius read nitier, 'rest on a new stock of children.' The ordinary reading is jungier = 'be continued by posterity.'

71. 'Did a land lack thy rites, she could not put forth defenders for her borders.'

quae = si qua.

78. 'Mark you how the torches toss their tresses of fire?' Cf. 98. For coma (κομή), used of fire, compare cometa (κομήτης). Add Aesch. Prom. 1,044, πυρός ἀμφήκης βόστρυχος (from Ellis).

81. 'True-born shame' (or 'modesty') 'tarries long' (or 'hangs back') ; 'and more attentive to its counsels, despite of all (tamen), than to any other (magis), she weeps because she needs must go.'

tardet. ἄπαξ λεγόμενον, if from tardere. Possibly, however, the construction of the lost portion of the stanza required a subjunctive here ; in that case tardet would be active, 'hold her back,' and comes from the common tardare.

P. 25. 91. Talis. 'In your likeness the hyacinth ever stands forth pre-eminent in a rich master's many-coloured garden of flowers.' Observe that the poet compares, not the bride to the flower, but the flower to the bride.

92. hortulo, 'pleasure-garden.'

93. stare. Cf. Hor. Od. i. ix. 1 :

'Vides ut alta stet nive candidum Soracte,'

where stet = 'stands out.'

95. prodeas, 'we pray you to come forth, young bride.' This line is omitted in the MSS.

97. videtur, 'if at length it is your pleasure.'

98. 'Mark how the torches toss their tresses of gold.'

101. 'No truant, no wicked harlot's captive in lewd impurity's train, your husband will not rest content apart from your tender breasts.'

levis, 'fickle.'

in, used of devotion to a loved object: 'wrapped in.' Cf. Hor. Od. I. xvii. 20:

'laborantes in uno
Penelopen vitreamque Circen.'

Add Hor. Sat. I. ix. 2, 'totus in illis.'

102. editus, 'surrendered,' 'helpless.'

103. proca. Cf. procus, procax. The idea is that of forward offers, i.e., meretricis. The quantity (prōca) seems irregular, but cf. perfidus, infidus. Ellis reads probra, to which the only objection is the unlikelihood of the easier changing to the harder reading.

106. lenta, 'limber vine.'

adsitas, 'planted by its side,' 'companion.' Cf. Ov. Her. v. 47:

'Non sic appositis vincitur vitibus ulmus,
Ut tua sunt collo brachia nexa meo.'

107. arbores, 'elms.'

115. 'the couch's gleaming foot,' probably made of ivory. Cf. X. 22, LXIV. 49.

116. 'How great are the joys that are coming to your lord, to be enjoyed by him in the roving night, and at noonday, i.e., at the siesta.'

P. 26. 126. 'Let not the saucy Fescennine banter long be dumb, nor let nuts be grudged to the boys by the boy favourite, when he learns that his master's love for him is abandoned.' The Fescennina licentia (Hor. Ep. II. i. 139), so called (it is said) from the town of Fescennium near Falerii, was one of the many forms of rustic banter, or coarse satiric dialogue, common to the ancient Latin and Etruscan village festivals. Obscene jokes, addressed (at any rate) to the bridegroom, seemed to have belonged to the Roman marriage ceremonial. Cf. Lucr. II. 369.

131. iners. The favourite's idle life is now over, owing to his master's marriage, and his own maturity (138). He must now fling away the nuts, as a renunciation of a life of play. Cf. Verg. Ec. VIII. 30.

134. Talasio is a word of entirely obscure origin, used as a cry at weddings. Here it seems to be used by Catullus as a dative: 'to serve Talasius,' i.e., the god of the settled, married state.

136. 'Only to-day or yesterday, favourite, the women of the farm were cheap in your eyes; now the barber must shave your face'; i.e., you must no longer presume on your lost boyish beauty. Cf. Hor. Od. IV. x. 5; Mart. XI. 78, 4.

sordebant. Cf. Verg. Ecl. II. 44, 'sordent tibi munera nostra.'

137. hodie atque heri, 'to-day or yesterday': cf. Dem. de Cor. 130: ὁψε λέγω; χθὲς μὲν οὖν καὶ πρόην.

141. 'The world will say of you, perfumed bridegroom, that it goes hard with you to withhold yourself from your smooth Ganymedes!'

146. 'We know that you have been familiar only with what is venial; but the things you wot of are no longer venial in wedlock.'

P. 27. 151. 'Take warning also, bride, that you baulk not your lord's will, lest he go to find his will abroad.'

156. 'Behold in what power and splendour your lord's house stands ready for you. Accept its constant service unto you for ever, until white age, shaking a palsied brow, nod "ay" to all in all things.'

163. annuat. The MSS. read annuit, as they read servit, 158.

166. transfer. 'Lift—and be the omen full of grace—lift across the threshold your softly golden feet, and enter the polished doorway.'

171. unus accubans, 'sitting single at table.'

173. immineat, 'bends his whole soul on you.'

176. 'In his secret breast a fire is kindled, not weaker but deeper than in you.'

177. uritur. Cf. Hor. Od. I. iv. 8 :

'Vulcanus ardens urit officinas.'

Prop. II. i. 54 :

'Colchis Iolchiacis urit aena focis.'

P. 28. 181. Before 181 is a pause in the song, during which the feast takes place : unless the feast precedes the arrival of the bride, as in LXII. 3, which is probable.

182. 'Purple-robed page, loose the little maiden's fair round arm.'

183. adeant, i.e., the bride and the pronubae. Ellis reads adeat.

186. 'Gracious matrons, who have lived in grace, each with one venerable lord.' Cf. CXI.:

'*Viro contentam vivere solo
Nympharum laus e laudibus eximiis,*' and Hor. Od. III. xiv. 5 :

'Unico gaudens mulier marito.'

188. collocate, 'bed.'

193. ore floridulo, 'bright with a tender bloom upon her face, like the pale convolvulus.'

197. nihilo minus, 'no less beautiful than she.'

199. negligit, 'does not pass you by.' Hom. II. iv. 127.

203. juverit, 'may Venus' grace attend you.'

204. cupis capis, 'win your will,' 'harvest your hopes.'

208. subducat numerum, 'let him first reckon the multitude.' Cf. VII. 3 note.

P. 29. 210. ludi, 'toyings.' Ludi is used collectively, like pulveris, 'particles of dust.' See Ellis' note.

212. non decet. 'A name so time-honoured should not want for heirs, but be continued by new births from the same stock for ever.'

216. Torquatus parvulus. Cf. Ver. Aen. iv. 320 :

' *si quis mihi parvulus aula
Lauleret Aeneas qui te tantum ore referret.* '

219. Dulce rideat. Cf. LI. 5 ; Verg. Ec. iv. 60 :

' Incipe parve puer risu cognoscere matrem. '

' My prayer is that a baby Torquatus, on his mother's lap, may stretch out tiny hands to his father, and smile sweetly upon him with little lips half-parted : that he may bear the features of his father Manlius, and easily announce himself to all men though they know him not, his face a witness to his mother's chastity : that he may have honour, to seal his descent from a gracious mother, as high as the peerless glory that rests, reflected from that most gracious mother, on Telemachus, surnamed of Penelope.'

223. omnibūs. Archaic lengthening ; or erroneous reading corrupted from obviis ; or a transposition of insciis and omnibus.

231. ostia, 'door.' Cf. Verg. Ec. III. 111.

232. lusimus satis, 'enough of our merry song.' Cf. L. 2.

234. munere, 'gracious pair, may you live in grace ; and constantly employ in your high duties a prime of health and strength.'

LXII.

This marriage-song has no special occasion. At least it contains no names, and no ideas peculiarly Roman. It is probably modelled upon, if not translated from, some Alexandrine Epithalamium, or perhaps a Sapphic original. The form is that of a dialogue between the two parts of a double chorus. The young men invoke, the maiden's reproach, the Evening Star ; the latter sing the beauty of virginity, the former the praises of the married state. The victory lies, of course, with the advocates of marriage, who continue with a final persuasion of the bride to be reconciled to her happier lot, and conclude the hymn.

1. Vesper. The planet Venus is at one time the evening, at another the morning star. As the first it is called Vesper Hesperus (Ἑσπερος) Hesperius, (Ἑσπέριος) Vesperugo, noctifer, &c.; as the second Lucifer (φῶσφορος), Eous, jubar. Compare "In Memoriam":

'Sweet Hesper-Phosphor, double name
For what is one, the first, the last,
Thou like my present and my past,
Thy place is changed : thou art the same.'

Add Meleager :

Ἡοῦς ἄγγελε χαῖρε, Φαῖσφορε, καὶ ταχὺς ἔλθοις
Ἑσπερος ἦν ἀπάγεις λάθριος αὐτοῖς ἄγων

Plato :

Ἀστὴρ πρὶν μὲν ἔλαμπες ἐνὶ ζωοῖσιν Ἑρῶς, νῦν δὲ θανῶν λάμπεις Ἑσπερος ἐν φθιμένοις.

Verg. Ciris 348-51 :

'*Postera lux ubi laeta diem mortalibus alnum
Praegelida veniens miseris quatiebat ab Oeta,
Quem pavidæ alternis fugitant optantque puellæ :
Hesperium vitant, optant ardescere Eoum.*'

The last is an obvious imitation of 38 sqq., and suggests strongly the reading Eous instead of the MSS. eosdem.¹

Olympo. Cf. Verg. Ec. vi. 86, 'processit Vesper Olympo.'

P. 30. 2. 'late in time, at last flings on the air his long-awaited beacon.'

3. pingues, 'though laden with rich meats.'

4. dicetūr. Cf. LXIV. 20, LXVI. 11.; Verg. Ec. vi. 53, 'fultūs hyacintho.'

5. Hymen. LXI. 5 note.

7. Nimirum. 'We may be sure that the herald of night flaunts his fires on the crest of Oeta.' Cf. Verg. Ec. viii. 30:

'tibi deserit Hesperus Oetam.'

Servius says 'Oeta mons Thessaliae . . . in eodem monte Hesperus coli dicitur, qui Hymenæum, speciosum puerum, amasse dicitur.'

¹ Compare the lines of Caius Cinna, Catullus' friend, whom he may have wished to flatter most sincerely by imitation :

'*Te matutinus flentem conspexit Eous,
Et flentem paulo vidit post Hesperus idem.*'

9. non temere. 'And yet not thoughtlessly: they will sing what we must in duty regard.'

visere. So the best MSS. An obvious emendation is vincere, 'what it is our task to surpass.'

11. 'We have no easy palm, brothers, already won.'
aequales i.e., aetate, ἡλικίαι.

12. secum requirunt, 'silently recall their studied lays. They do not study in vain: they bring with them something fit to live. How should they not, for they labour in the deep mines of thought?'

15. 'We have parted our thoughts to one side, our ears to another.' Cf. Verg. Aen. VIII. 20:

'animum nunc huc celerem nunc dividit illuc.'

16. jure, 'fairly.'

amat, 'for victory is the friend of diligence.' Cf. Eurip. Phoen.: τὸ νικᾶν ἐστὶ πᾶν εὐβουλία.

17. saltem, 'fling your courage, at least, into the contest.'

20. fertur, 'what more pitiless fire rides in Heaven than thine?'

22. retinentem, 'pluck the clinging child from,' &c.

23. ardenti, 'to a burning lover surrender,' &c.

P. 31. 27. qui desponsa, 'who shinest to ratify covenants of marriage, long plighted by husband and by father, yet unjoined (not made into union), until thy gleam has gone up on high.'

29. nec, 'and yet not.' Cf. xxx. 4 note.

32. The sequence of thought may have been: 'Hesperus is a robber, for he brings night, when watchers wake and robbers lurk.' To which the answer is returned (37): 'True, robbers lurk by night; but Hesper returns as Phospor, and arrests them.' Thus 32-35 would have run something like the following:

*'Hesperus e nobis, aequales, abstulit unam:
Ecqua tuum virgo non oderit, Hespere, nomen?
Namque tuo adventu vigilat custodia semper:
Nocte latent fures; tu noctem furibus affers.'*

37. fures, 'thieves of love.' Cf. VII. 8, 'furtivos hominum amores.' idem eosdem, 'whom thou returnest, changed not in person but in title, to arrest still in their trespass.' For Eosdem, Schrader reads Eous. Cf. v. 1 note.

40. quid tum, 'what shall be said?' Cf. Verg. Ec. x. 38:
'quid tum, si fuscus Amyntas?'

42. secretus, 'a flower, growing in a nook, within garden walls.'

44. 'To which the breezes give sweetness, and the sun strength, and the rains stature.'

mulcent, 'sweeten.' Ellis renders 'stroke.'

47. 'Once that flower is nipt with the thin nail, and its blossom shed.'

49. 'So it is with the maiden so long as she remains untainted, endeared to her kindred; but, the flower of pure maidenhood once fallen from her soiled form, she impassions youths and she is dear to maidens no more for ever.'

P. 32. 53. vidua, 'unwedded.' So of the elm, reversely, Hor. Od. iv. v. 30:

'Et vitem viduas ducit ad arbores.'

nudo, 'on an unsheltered soil.'

54. educat, 'plump the mellow cluster.'

55. 'But ever, as she bends her unin vigorated frame in drooping heaviness, about to brush topmost tendril with root.'

56. jam jam, 'about to.' Verg. Aen. II. 530.

flagellum. Verg. Geor. II. 279.

58. marito, 'her husband, the elm.' Cf. Hor. II. xv. 4:

'platanus coelebs
Evincet ulmos.'

60. inculta, 'uncherished,' 'falls untended into years.'

61. par, 'when in fulness of time she has won an espousal in her own station.' Cf. Ov. Her. IX. 32:

'Si qua voles apte nubere, nube pari.'

65. 'It is rebellious to resist one to whom you have been surrendered.'

LXIII.

For a complete account of the worship of Cybele see Ellis' introduction to this poem, a fine example of his vast erudition. For the Galliambic metre see Appendix I.

The worship of the 'Great Mother' (whom Lucretius identifies with Tellus, giving an explanation of the allegorical elements of her procession, II. 600), was introduced into Rome from Phrygia, in obedience to a command of the Sibylline books, 203 B.C. Her image, a small black stone, was brought from Pessinus, a town on the slope of Dindymus; in her honour a temple was built, and the games called Megalesia established.

There is nothing, however, that is specially Roman in the treatment of her cultus in the present poem. Every allusion is essentially Greek; and all internal evidence would allow, if indeed it does not suggest, that we have here a translation of a lost Greek model. The ἀπαξ λεγόμενα, such as ederigeræ properipedem, silvicultrix, nemorivagus, erifugæ, would then be attempts to render the Greek compounds of the original; so foro, v. 60, is used in the sense of ἀγόρα, the associations of which word (and not at all those of the Latin forum) are intended to be presented. Roman literature on the subject of the magna mater, it is also to be remarked, contains no allusion to Attis, down to the date of the present poem; of which we may at least affirm, that in versification, phraseology, and conception, it is essentially Greek.

The distinctive features of the worship of Cybele were an enthusiastic excitement, amounting to madness (μαίνεσθαι τῇ θεᾷ), fasting, and self-castration. Attis, here a Greek youth, not a god, is represented as leaving his home under an irresistible impulse which had seized him as a devotee of the Idaean Mother; as crossing the Aegean; as landing near the Phrygian Ida, and penetrating the forests, that clothe the mountain to its summit, the sacred abode of the goddess; whence he is suffered to return no more.

Catullus' friend, Caecilius, seems to have begun a poem on this subject; xxxv. 14.

1. super, 'on the crest.'

P. 33. 2. citato cupide pede, 'with restless foot and hot desire.'

3. opaca loca, 'the dark forest-bound demesne.'

4. vagus animis, 'lost in passion.'

5. ili, genitive, depending on pondera, 'with a sharp flint dashed his testicles to the ground.' Cf. Ov. Fast. iv. 241:

'Onus inguinis aufert
Nullaque sunt subito signa relicta viri.'

6. sine viro, 'unmanned.' Cf. Lucan. x. 133 (quoted by Ellis):

'ferro mollita juventus,
Atque exsecta virum.'

7. etiam, 'still staining the surface of the earth.'

8. niveis, like teneris, 10, = womanish.

citata. Attis is henceforward spoken of indifferently as of either sex. Translate, 'the restless feminine shape.'

typanum is another form of tympanum, 'tambourine.'

9. tubam. As the trumpet is an instrument employed, not in Greek, but in Roman ritual, Ellis would render this word (very harshly) as in apposition to typanum, and somehow equivalent to ἀντὶ σάλπιγγος, the tambourine which is in the rites of Cybele what the trumpet is in the rites of other gods, 'the tambourine that is trumpet to Cybele.'

Munro reads 'ac typum,' signifying a medallion of Cybele worn by her worshippers. A simple, but rather weak, alteration is to tuum Cybelle. The name has various forms, Κυθήλη, Κύβελλα, Κυβέλη, Κυθήνη.

mater. Cf. magna mater, Idaea mater, mater deorum.

initia, 'ritual,' 'mystic instrument.'

12. Gallae. The emasculated priests of the Phrygian goddess were generally called Galli. Cf. Verg. Aen. ix. 617:

'O vere Phrygiae, nec enim Phryges, ite per alta
Dindyma, ubi assuetis biformem dat tibia cantum.
Tympana vos buxusque vocat Berecynthia matris
Idaeae; sinite arma viris.'

13. vaga pecora, 'wandering sheep.'

15. sectam, 'path.' Cf. Cic. Nat. Deor. ii. 22, 'omnis natura habet quasi viam quandam et sectam quam sequatur. Ellis renders 'following my rule,' certainly adopting the commoner meaning of the word.

16. truculentaque pelagi, 'the savagery of ocean.' Cf. Verg. Aen. IX. 81, 'pelagi petere alta.' Pelage is read, unnecessarily, by many editors.

17. aere, 'with wanderings fired by the clang of brass.' If erae be read, it will depend on animum, 'the goddess's soul.'

21. cymbalum, if vox be read, is genitive; if nox be read, it will be accusative after sonat, like hominem sonat, Verg. Aen. I. 328. But the evidence for the latter reading is very slight.

reboant, 'reverberate.'

22. curvo, 'when the Phrygian piper sounds his deep note on the horned reed,' i.e., his pipe has a horn-shaped extremity.

canit grave. Cf. dulce ridentem, LI. 4, turpe incedere, XLII. 8.

24. sacra sancta, 'with shrill screams wake their inviolate orgies.'

26. nos celerare, 'hasten our going with triple dancing step.'

tripudiis = the dancing step of religious processions. Cf. Liv. I. 20, 'Salios ancilia ferre ac per urbem ire canentes carmina cum tripudiis sollemnique saltatu jussit.'

27. notha mulier, 'counterfeiting womanhood.'

28. thiasus, 'rout.' LXIV. 253.

trepidantibus, 'tumultuous.'

29. recrepant, 'crash in answer.'

P. 34. 31. 'Feverish, panting, wandering waywardly, pouring her soul in sighs, with nothing at her side but the tambourine, Attis leads through the dark woods.'

35. See General Introduction I.

39. oris aurei. It is not necessary to take this as a descriptive genitive ('golden-visaged sun,' Ellis), as it may depend on oculis.

40. lustravit, 'surveyed.' Perhaps 'brightened.' Cf. Verg. Aen. iv. 6:

'Postera Phoebea lustrabat lampade terras Humentemque Aurora polo dimoverat umbram.'

41. vegetis, 'new risen.' Cf. Tennyson, 'Tithonus.'

43. 'And found a haven in the fluttering bosom of Queen Pasithea.' Hom. Il. xiv. 250. A possible variant is trepidantem.

45. ipse recoluit, 'alone, within his soul, revived what he had done.'

46. liquida mente, 'with purged understanding saw what he lacked, and where he was.' Sine queis, cf. vv. 5, 6.

47. animo aestuante, 'in a surge of passion.' Cf. LXIV. 62, fluctuat.

48. maria vasta, 'the wilderness of waters.'

49. miseriter. Cf. XXXIX. 14 note.

50. creatrix genetrix, 'that gave me being that gave me birth.'

51. miser, 'to my ruin.'

53. 'To be in the land of snow, where the wild beasts have their chilly stalls, and to visit all their ravening lairs.' Cf. Verg. Aen. vi. 179, 'Stabula alta ferarum.'

55. locis, 'quarter.'

reor, 'am I to think?' I. I note.

59. abero, 'shall I be lost to market-place, wrestling-school, race-course, and gymnasium?'

P. 35. 61. miser a miser anime, 'twice unhappy soul! again and again must I make my moan.'

62. genus figurae, 'what fashion of comely person have I not filled?' Another reading is habuerim, which is easier, and so far less likely to be original.

64. olei, 'the oiled ring.'

65. tepida, 'warm' with the feet of lovers.

68. ministra, famula, 'serving woman,' 'handmaid.'

69. mei pars, 'but half myself.'

vir sterilis, 'a man unmanned.'

70. nive amicta, 'snowy-mantled.'

71. columinibus, 'pinnacles,' peculiar pointed rocks of Phrygia. See Ellis' note.

73. Jam jam. Cf. LXII. 56.

dolet, 'pains me,' active. Cf. Prop. I. 16, 24:

'Frigida Eoo me dolet aura gelu.'

Or, perhaps, impersonal. Cf. Plaut. Men. II. iii. 84:

'mihi dolebit non tibi si quid ego stulte fecero.'

74. hinc. Ellis reads huic abiit, against the MSS.

celer. A word is wanting in the MSS., and Lachmann thus supplies it from the redundant celeri of v. 14.

75. Geminas deorum. Cf. deum, 68. After Lachmann matris is read for deorum, which was thought to be an explanatory gloss. Munro suggests deae tam. It has been proposed to transpose vv. 75 and 76, and read eorum = leonum; but this alteration, though attractive, is unjustified by any evidence not internal.

nuntia. Lucr. IV. 704, 1032, where, however, the word is not an undoubted substantive.

77. laevum, 'the lion to the left,' or less well, 'goading on the left side.'

pecoris hostem = ταυροκτόνον λέοντα.

78. agitet, 'drive.' Not in the MSS.

79. ictu, 'under the lash of frenzy.'

80. libere nimis, 'in presumptuous freedom.'

84. religat, 'bound up the loosened harness.'

85. 'Summoning all his might, the beast roused himself to speed in his soul.' See General Introduction I.

ferus, substantive. Cf. LXIV. 176 note.

P. 36. 93. rapidus. Ellis (against the weight of the MSS.) reads rabidos.

In this Epyllion Catullus has made extensive use of his wide knowledge of Greek literature: on the subject of his debts to the Greek poets, see Quaestio I. He has also been largely imitated by later Latin writers: see Quaestio II. For an account of the Catullan Hexameter, see Appendix I.

This poem has been much criticised for the 'inordinate disproportion of its parts,' and 'want of artistic finish at the junctures.' These are discoveries of the numbered tape and critical nail which cannot be grudged to the discoverers. They are made, however, by the same scholars who maintain, alii alio modo, the rigid mathematical symmetry of Catullus' other poems. These scholars will therefore be ready to admit that Catullus could not have committed these faults unconsciously. He must have intended the alleged 'disproportion of the parts,' he must have meant to be careless of 'artistic finish at the junctures.' In fairness, then, we should examine his purpose before condemning the means he took to work it out, and if the purpose be poetically good, then judge the means by their effect; for there may, perhaps, be a higher unity than is attained by the observance of the unities, and its parts may be organically connected, requiring no 'callida junctura.'

The simple argument of the poem has been told in the General Introduction I. The purpose of the poem is equally simple. It is to give a picture of the 'golden prime of the ages,' when man walked with gods. Man was frail indeed, even then; but suffering followed close as the medicine of sin, and wronged innocence was exalted. An earthly hero was welcome to the gods, who honoured him with affinity to themselves, with gifts, and with their presence at his table. For men were then of pure, good birth; and from the union of god and man sprang the brightest patterns of chivalry.

The general sentiment is similar to that of the Fourth Eclogue of Virgil. In one particular, the blessedness of family purity—a feeling much stronger and more predominant in Rome at the fall of the Republic than we can well understand now—appears in Catullus' address to the heroes (22-24) and his closing lament (398 ad fin.); and the same feeling also underlies the whole of Virgil's poem, breaking out more clearly in the last lines, which end with a distinct echo¹ of the 'Peleus and Thetis,'

'Cui non risere parentes
Nec deus hunc mensa dea nec dignata cubili est.'

Virgil hoped for the golden past to return. Catullus paints, with the fondness of regret, two or three special scenes. Old-world heroism, as without reproach, is portrayed in Peleus, fit to consort with gods; as without fear, in Theseus. Theseus should indeed have been in fear 'of his own soul'; but the punishment of his sin is quick and heavy. More than this, it is wrought through his filial love: contrast the heroic affection of Theseus and Aegeus, with the modern relation of father and son shown in vv. 401-2. Ancient justice, moreover, not only held the sword, to punish wrong; but with her other hand gave rich compensation to the wronged. From the lonely shore Ariadne is raised to the stars, and her sobs are changed into the wild mirth and music of Iacchus 'and his jolly crew.' So, in a wedding mood, we are naturally brought back to the marriage-hall. There, when the mortals retire, the scene grows in grandeur and in solemnity, as the lesser gods and then the great gods appear and take their places; and as last of all the most high Fates chant their annunciation of the glorious issue of manhood and godhead united.

In this conception there is surely no gap or disproportion. The subject is one; all the parts are proper to its presentation, and are arranged in a simple and graceful order. It is not the arrangement of the Virgilian epic, still less of an eighteenth-century epopée. It is the natural, effective arrangement of his subject, chosen by one of the world's great poets, who do not write by rule, although they are the true legislators in literature.

1. prognatae, 'that grew to their stature on Pelion's crown.'
2. liquidas, 'clear-flowing.'
3. Aeetaeos, 'the frontiers of Aeetes,' father of Medea.
4. lecti pubis, 'chosen warriors, the staunchest hearts of Argive chivalry.' Cf. v. 79.
5. avertere is specially used of carrying away spoil: cf. Verg. Aen. x. 78, avertere praedas, and VIII. 208.

¹ Cf. also vv. 46, 47 of this Eclogue.

6. decurrere denotes smooth, rapid sailing. Cf. Verg. Aen. v. 212 :

‘Prona petit maria et pelago decurrit aperto.’

For the accusative, cf. Verg. Aen. III. 171 :

‘Vastamque cava trabe currimus aequor.’

8. Diva = Pallas πολιοῦχος. Compare II. vi. 88 :

‘νηὸν Ἀθηναίης γλαυκώπιδος ἐν πόλι ἄκρη.’

For the descriptive use of the participle cf. LXI. 17, and infra, v. 193.

9. currum, ‘with her own hand built a car to fly before the light breeze.’ Cf. Aesch. Pr. 475, ναυτίλων ὀχημάτων.

10. texta, ‘wedding a tissue of pine to the curved keel.’

11. rudem imbuit, ‘initiated unschooled Amphitrite in voyaging.’

12. proscidit. Used by Virgil of first ploughing, Geor. i. 97 :

‘proscisso quae suscitatur aequore terga,’ &c.

13. tortaque remigio, ‘the wave, swirling beneath the oars, turned into white foam.’

14. ‘There arose wild faces out of the white eddy, the faces of Nereus’ sea-daughters wondering at the portent.’

feri. Munro would read freti, and make vultus accusative after emersere, on the (rather remote) analogy of emergere se.

16. illac haudque. The MSS. read illa atque alia ; Ellis, illa atque haud alia ; Munro, illa (quaque alia ?).

18. Nutricum tenus, ‘the bodies of the sea-nymphs, revealed breast high above the breakers.’

20. despexit hymenaeos. Cf. LXII. 4 note.

21. pater=Juppiter : cf. vv. 26-7.

sensit, ‘felt,’ under the persuasion of prophecy.

P. 37. 22. nimis optato, ‘born in the too happy prime of the ages.’

23. matrum. Ellis would read mater (meaning the Argo) and would omit the next verse, which is quoted from the Veronese Scholia on Aen. v. 80. Munro most excellently continues v. 24, 'iterumque iterumque bonarum.'

26. eximie, 'above all men.'

aucte, 'graced with a nuptial torch of happy promise.' Cf. LXVI. 11, 'novo auctus hymenaeo.'

27. columen, 'pillar,' 'buttress.' Cf. Hor. Od. II. xvii. 4:

*'Maecenas, mearum
Grande decus columenque rerum.'*

28. concessit amores, 'surrendered his own beloved.'

29. Neptunine is the nearest reading to the MSS. (for the form cf. Oceanine), and, as unusual, is unlikely to be a corruption. Otherwise Nereine (cf. v. 15, Verg. Ecl. VII. 37) would be preferable. Thetis was daughter of Doris, daughter of Oceanus and Tethys, hence neptem, 30.

31. amplectitur, 'whose stream encircles the whole round earth.'

32. optato finito, 'when the happy season came due and the days arrived.' This is an unusual sense of finito. Optatae is read = 'when the happy days arrived at their appointed season.' Other texts give finitae = 'the days determined by the approach of the welcome time' (Ellis).

33. conventu, 'in concourse.' domum, i.e. Pelei.

36. Scyros. An emendation is Cieros, a Thessalian town, like Cranio and Larissa, and certainly more appropriate than the distant island Scyros.

38. Pharsāliam Pharsālia. To avoid the variation of quantity, Rossbach reads Pharsalum (Φαρσαλον); but such variation in proper names is common, from Homer's Ἄρες 'Apes downwards.

frequentant, 'throng,' 'crowd.'

41. prono, 'the bull does not rend the sod with the deep-sunk share.'

43. squalida, 'scales of rust steal over the forgotten plough.'

44. recessit, 'far as the rich palace revealed its chambers'—literally 'went back.'

46. 'The thrones are of white ivory, the tables bear glittering cups.' Soliis is said to be dative, like Verg. Aen. vi. 603, and so also mensae (Ellis). But the passage quoted is as ambiguous as the present. It is therefore safer to translate, 'Ivory gleams on the thrones, and the vessels of the table glitter together.' It is also just conceivable that mensae is locative.

48. pulvinar geniale, 'the holy couch of consummation.' Pulvinar is used only of the couch of a god.

49. sedibus in mediis, 'in the middle hall.'

Indo dente politum, 'made of polished Indian tusk.' Cf. 'pictas abiete puppes,' Verg. Aen. v. 633 (quoted by Munro) = 'poops of painted pine.' Cf. Id. i. 655. See XII. 9 note.

50. 'Covered by purple drapery, dyed with the sea-shell's crimson tint.'

51. variata, 'pictured with antique shapes of men.' Cf. 160, prisci praecepta parentis. In both cases there seems a kind of hypallage, for 'shapes of men of old,' 'antique injunctions of thy sire.'

P. 38. 53. fluentis sono, 'torrent-voiced.'

Diaē, the old name of Naxos. Odys. xi. 321, Δία ἐν ἀμφιπόρῃ.

56. sese quae visit visere credit is Voss's magnificent correction of the MSS., 'seseque sui tui se credit.'

57. Ut pote quae, 'No wonder, since she then first waked from the sleep that played her false.'

60. 'Bequeathing his void vows to the blustering gale,' xxx. 10.

63. 'As she tossed in a great sea of troubles, she did not hold fast on her golden head her fine-spun snood; her bosom was not sheltered by her mantle's thin covering; her swelling breasts were unbound from the shapely scarf. All these garments slipped idly down from her whole frame, and before their mistress' feet were kissed by the salt breakers. Recking not in such an hour, what came to floating snood or mantle, with her whole feeling and her whole spirit and all her thought she hung, love-lorn, on thee.'

70. vicem. This accusative is always used adverbially, with a genitive or possessive pronoun. So 'tuam vicem, Menedemi vicem, miseret me' = I am sorry for your sake, for the sake of Menedemus.

72. externavit, 'dismayed,' 'confounded.' Cf. consternare. Others have derived the word, somewhat strangely, from externus. If that were possible, we should translate 'un-selfed,' 'put beside herself.' Cf. 166 and Ov. Met. i. 641.

74. 'In all that season, ever since Theseus in his pride.'

75. curvis, 'winding.' The shape of the Piraeus was compared to that of a mulberry or fig leaf.

76. templa, 'sanctuary.' Priam's palace is so called by Ennius. Ellis (surely against the probabilities of MSS.) now reads tecta, meaning perhaps the labyrinth.

79. decus innuptarum, 'the glory of her maidenhood.'

P. 39. 83. projicere, 'hazard.'

84. funera nec funera, 'Cecropia's living deaths.' Cf. Cic. Phil. i. 2, 'insepulta sepultura.' The meaning is that the vessel bore the victims, as it were in funeral procession, to their end; the difference being that their bodies were yet alive, not dead. The expression is of course a Grecism, after τάφος ἄταφος, γάμος ἄγαμος, &c. Nec is either simply the equivalent of non as in fur nec-manifestus, res nec-mancipi; or else is used correctively = 'although not,' 'and yet not.' Cf. xxx. iv. and Ov. Met. viii. 231:

'At pater infelix, nec jam pater, "Icare" dixit,' quoted, however, by Munro in support of the former view.

91. distinctos, 'or the varied tints tempted forth by the breath of spring.'

93. conceptit, 'drained into the depths of her whole frame.'

95. immiti corde, 'heartless exciter of the fevers of passion.' Cf. Verg. Ecl. viii. 49,

'Crudelis mater magis an puer improbus ille?'

The *furor*es must, after what has just passed, be in the lover's breast, not, as Ellis strangely takes it, in Love's.

96. curis miscet. Cf. II. 10, LXVIII. 18; γλυκύπικρον κέντρον ἐρώτων, Musaeus.

99. in flavo, 'sighing oft for the sake of the golden-haired stranger.' Cf. Hor. Od. I. xvii. 19 :

' Dices laborantes in uno Pencloper vitreamque Circen,'

and the use of in in the sense of 'devoted to,' 'for the sake of,' with ardere.

101. Quanto, 'how much paler did she often grow than gold's pale brightness !' Quanto magis is quite regular.

> 104. 'Not without return, however, and not in vain were the warm vows breathed by her sweet silent lips as she offered to the great gods her girlish sacrifices.'

105. succendit. In Latin the metaphor is often contained in the verb, where we should express it in noun or adjective. The common emendation is succēpit (tritum pro novo atque elegante).

107. conigeram, 'with its burden of cones and resinous bark.'

108. contorquens robur, 'wrenching the strong timber.'

109. exturbata, 'dislodged by the roots it falls far from its seat, crown downwards, and crushes all things round with its leaves in its death-agony.'

110. comis obit omnia. The MSS. gives cumeius obvia omnia. Munro reads obit obvia (= obstacles); Rossbach, et cominus. There are many other emendations more remote from the MSS.

P. 40. 116. error, 'lest he should be baulked by the structure's undistinguishable maze.' Cf. Verg. Aen. v. 591, VI. 27.

120. laeta, is the MSS. reading, for which Ellis adopts (malgré soi) Conington's feeble and inappropriate 'lamentata est' instead of Lachmann's laetabatur, 'Who took in her daughter an ill-starred overmastering joy.'

123. Venerit, so Lachmann supplies the wanting verb.

124. immemori. Cf. xxx. 1 note.

128. 'That thence she might lengthen her gaze over the wild surges of ocean.'

129. adversas, 'that rose to meet her.'

130. 'Lifting high her bared ankles' soft draperies.

132. 'Summoning from her tear-wet lips sad, chill sobs.'

135. neglecto numine, 'careless of the sanction of the gods, bearest home as thy freight the curse of perjury.'

138. praesto, 'Did never mercy stand beside thee to prompt thy cruel breast to pity me?'

141. voce, 'in clear words.' mihi jubebas is unusual in verse.

P. 41. 142. optates, 'long-dreamed-of nuptials.'

143. discerpunt, 'all these the winds of the air shred into nothingness.' Cf. xxx. and lx., which together reproduce much of this lament.

144. Tum jam, 'from the hour of my betrayal onwards.'

145. sermones, 'look for loyalty in her lover's whispers.'

146. Queis, i.e. nam viris. Cf. for similar ad sensum construction Demosth. de Coron. 310, ἀνδρι καλῶ τε κάγαθῶ, ἐν οἷς κ.τ.λ.; Eurip. Orestes, 85, &c. 'For while their soul is restless to enjoy some desire,' &c.

150. turbine, 'whirled in death's innermost eddy.'

151. germanum, 'brother,' i.e., the Minotaur. crevi = 'resolved.'

152. tibi fallaci, 'thee, my betrayer.' Cf. 176. supremo tempore, 'last hour.'

154. tumulabor, 'nor, when I am dead, will a mound of earth be heaped above me.' Burial was all-important to the rest of the departed soul. Cf. Hor. Od. i. xxviii., Verg. Aen. iii. 19 seq.

156. conceptum expuit, 'conceived and spat out.'

160. Cf. 51 note.

Si at, 'if yet at least.' Cf. xxx. 11 note.

163. vestigia, 'softly laving thy white feet with water from the spring.' Cf. Verg. Aen. v. 566, 'vestigia primi alba pedis.'

165. ignaris, 'brute breezes, that, endowed with no faculties, can neither hear spoken words, nor speak them back.'

167. missas. Cf. Hor. A.P. 390, 'nescit vox missa reverti.'

170. nimis insultans, 'rioting in triumph in my hour of agony.'

P. 42. 172. tempore primo, 'in that first hour.'

174. dira stipendia, 'fatal tribute.'

176. malus hic, 'this evildoer, hiding cruel purposes under a mask of beauty.' For adjective used nearly as noun, when accompanied by a pronoun, cf. tibi fallaci v. 152, ferus ipse LXIII. 85, tacito CII. 1.

179. Idomeneos, 'Cretan.' Idomeneus was, however, nephew of Ariadne, so that the epithet involves an anachronism.

an, 'shall I go where the broad surge of estranging ocean's boisterous surface parts those hills from me?' Ellis reads a! and omits ubi.

181. quemne, 'What to him, whom,' &c. For relative with interrogative particle, cf. Verg. Aen. iv. 538, 'quiane.'

184. lentos, 'his springing oars.'

185. 'Worse than all, a homeless shore, an island of desolation!'

187. ratio, 'plan.'

nullā spes. Cf. XVII. 24, and contrast Verg. Aen. xi. 309, 'Ponitē: spes.'

191. justam, 'demand the full penalty for my betrayal.'

192. fidem, 'honour.'

193. mulctantes. For descriptive participle cf. 8 note.

194. 'Whose forehead, circled with snaky locks, heralds the exhaling passions of your breast.'

197. vae misera. The nominative is uncommon with vae, but cf. Verg. Ecl. ix. 28:

'Mantua vae miserae nimium vicina Cremonae,' and vae demens, quoted by Ellis from Ov. Am. III. vi. 101.

199. 'Since my complaints are just, and rise from my heart.'

201. quali mente, 'with the same thoughtless cruelty that made him leave me to my fate, may he bring death on himself and his.'

P. 43. 203. profudit. Pro before a breathing is common in quantity.

205. numine, 'bowed assent with his sovereign nod.'

206. horrida, 'ruffled.' Cf. 271.

207. mundus, 'firmament.'

209. consitus, 'drenched in a cloud of darkness.'

211. dulcia signa. v. 235.

217. dubios, 'send far on perilous adventures.'

218. 'But a little ago restored to me in the last decline of my old age.' Aegeus left his mistress, Aethra, the princess of Troezen, pregnant with Theseus, bidding her tell her son, should she bear one, when he came to years, to lift his sword and sandals from beneath a rock under which he had placed them. This Theseus did, and so became known to his father.

221. cara saturata figura, 'whose wan eyes have not yet fed enough on my son's dear shape.'

224. expromam, used of taking from a treasury or storehouse, LXV. 3 (cf. promus = house-steward). Hor. Epist. I. i. 12:

'Condo et compono qua mox depromere possum,' and Od. I. ix. 3.

225. 'Defiling my white hairs with sprinkled dust of the earth.'

226. vago, 'errant,' i.e., going on long journeys. Ellis would render 'swaying,' a sense requiring more illustration.

infecta, 'darkly dyed.'

227. dicet, 'proclaim.' Lachmann alters to decet.

with heart's love, and to haste to share with thee soft languors of sleep, pillowing thy manly neck on her smooth arms.' Ellis reads flexanimo = 'thee, soul-subdued' (apparently).

mentis amorem. Cf. 373.

335. contextit, 'sheltered love so deep, . . . as is the harmony between Peleus and Thetis.'

341. vago . . . cursus, 'often conqueror in the wide-ranging race' = πρόδus ἀγώνος.

342. flammea. Cf. Verg. Aen. XI. 718, igneae.

praevertet, 'outstrip.'

344. se conferet, 'match himself.' Cf. Verg. Aen. I. 475, 'impar congressus Achillei.'

346. longinquo, 'distant'; or 'lengthy,' 'protracted.'

347. heres = Agamemnon, grandson of Pelops, whose perjury consisted in violating his promise to give half his kingdom, should he win Hippodamia in the chariot race, to Myrtilus, (charioteer of her father Oenomaus), whom he murdered.

P. 48. 351. in cinerem, 'when they bury their sons, and fling upon their ashes their white hairs, and with weak palms bruise their withered breasts.' It was customary to fling locks of hair on the funeral pyre. Ellis reads incurvo = 'bowed heads,' for the MSS. in civium. We might otherwise translate, 'loose their white hair to receive the ashes,' i.e., sprinkle ashes on their heads. But this is less probable.

354. prosternens. praecerpens (Ellis) = 'lopping.' Cf. Shakspeare, Troilus, v. v:

'And then the strawy Greeks, ripe for his edge,
Fell down before him like the mower's swathe.'

359. 'That spreads itself and is lost in the tides of Hellespont.'

360. augustans, 'choking its stream with stricken bodies of the slain.' Cf. Il. XXI. 218.

363. 'Lastly, they shall be attested by the sacrifice paid to death, when the smooth barrow, heaped into a high mound, shall receive as its due the snowy form of the butchered maiden.'

368. solvere vincla, 'to burst the belt of walls cast by Neptune round the city of Dardan.' Cf. Il. xvi. 100, Τροίης κρήδεμνα λύωμεν.

369. maefient. Rossbach, mutescant, i.e., no more voices issue from Achilles' tomb. MSS., malescent.

370. ancipiti = 'two-edged.'

371. truncum, 'bent her knees and fell forwards, a headless corpse.'

375. cupido jam dudum, 'long expectant.'

dedatur, 'surrender.'

P. 49. 378. hesterno filo. If a marriage was duly consummated, it was thought that the measure of the bride's neck was slightly enlarged—a superstition still current in this country.

380. 'Nor shall a heart-sick mother weep that her daughter loves not and lies not with her lord, or cease to hope for dear grandchildren.'

383. praefantes, 'dictating such strains of happiness to Peleus.' Pelei = Πηλεΐ: cf. Achillei, Verg. Aen. i. 475; but Peleo (dative) supra, 337. See Appendix II.

385. praesentes, 'in bodily form.'

386. coetu, dative, 'to the company of mortals.' Cf. LXVI. 37.

387. pietate = 'religion,' i.e., duty to God and man.

388. revisens cannot be taken (by any archaism) with templo in fulgente. 'Returning ever when his yearly rites came round with their festal days, sat in his bright shrine, and saw,' &c.

393. Delphi, 'the men of Delphi.'

certatim, 'with rival eagerness watched and welcomed the god.'

ruentes is against the best MSS.

396. Tritonis, 'the queen of streaming Triton,' (a river or lake) in Libya or Boeotia = Pallas. Cf. Τριτογένεια.

Rhamnusia, 'virgin of Rhamnus' (in Attica) = Nemesis.

imbuta est, fugarunt, perfudere, destitit, optavit, non verita est, are all under the regimen of postquam.

403. liber, 'that he might be free to enjoy the beauty of his yet unwedded second bride.'

405. divos scelerare parentes, 'cast a slur on the memory of her sainted parents.'

P. 50. 406. 'The medley of all things, fit and foul, brought about by sin and madness, has revolted the righteous heart of the gods, and turned it from us.'

409. contingi, 'to be bathed in the sunlight,' i.e., appear on earthly scenes.

LXV.

The Ortalus of this poem may have been Cicero's rival 'in regno forensi,' Q. Hortensius Ortalus. Unable, under the grief caused by the news of his brother's death in the Troad, to fulfil a promise to send to Ortalus some original poems, Catullus still is able to send some translations from Callimachus, of which perhaps LXVI. was one. Catullus dwells on his brother's death with the utmost tenderness in LXVIII. 19-26, LXVIII B. 91-98, CI.

1. 'Though I am worn out by grief that will not leave me, and called away by my distress from the virgin goddesses of poetry.' Doctas, cf. xxxv. 17.

3. fetus, 'fruits.' expromere, LXIV. 224.

4. mens animi, 'the imagination of my soul.' Cf. Lucr. III. 615, &c.

fluctuat, 'in such a tide of her own troubles is she tossed.'

6. pallidulum, 'for, but a little while ago, a rising wave from Lethe's stream washed up to my brother's poor pale foot.'

8. ereptum obterit, 'ravished, and crushes and hides from my eyes.'

9. This verse is omitted in almost all MSS. Munro would fill up the lacuna, 'Nunquam ego te primae mihi ademptum in flore juventae,' which Catullus might have written. If the text stand, the word lacking before loquentem may have been facta (Voss); audiero is irregular in tense (audibo?). Cf. ix. 6 for sentiment.

12. canam, 'sing songs ever saddened by thy death.' The MSS. have tegam, 'veil in silence' (Ellis). But it is hard to understand what this could mean, and Munro ingeniously explains the genesis of the corruption.

13. concinit, 'sings for ever.'

14. Daulias. Cf. Thuc. II. 29. Procne, wife of Tereus, who ruled in Daulis of Phocis, slew, in a fit of resentment, her husband's son, Itys or Itylus. After the deed she was changed into a bird, the swallow or the nightingale, and doomed for ever to 'bewail the cruel end of lost Itylus.'

16. expressa, 'translated.'

Battiadae = of Callimachus, who called himself a son of Battus. Cf. VII. 4.

18-24. These lines have been thought to belong to another poem. Cf. II. 11-13 note. Their connection, however, with the previous thought is much more natural than in the other cases there mentioned; and, if they have fallen accidentally into this place, then fortune has 'shown herself a pretty poet.'

'Slipped from my mind, as the gift-apple, stealthily flung to a maiden by her lover, escapes from her innocent bosom. Laid in a fold of the poor thoughtless girl's soft robe, as she springs to greet her mother, it is shaken out. Heigho! down to the ground drops the tell-tale in rolling descent, while the maiden's sad face is flooded with a guilty blush.'

23. Atque. Aul. Gellius (x. 29) says that atque has the unusual sense of statim in the lines of Virgil (modelled on the present passage) occurring Geor. I. 201-3:

*'Non aliter quam qui adverso vix flumine lembum
Remigiis subigit, si brachia forte remisit
Atque illum in praeceps prono rapit alveus amni.'*

Conington there gives atque its usual connecting force, saying that here also it 'couples agitur with excutitur, or perhaps with procurrit.' But a particle that hesitates is lost; and I am glad to receive the sanction of Ellis in taking atque as introducing 'in the form of an emphatic concluding clause a sudden and unexpected catastrophe.' Cf. Atque, LXVI. 33.

LXVI.

P. 51. This poem, generally called 'Coma Berenices,' is a version of the lost Βερενίκης πλόκαμος of Callimachus, and may have been one of the translations sent by Catullus to Ortaus, in lieu of original verses (LXV. 16.)

Of Callimachus, Ovid in his critical catalogue of poets (Am. I. xv) says:

*'Battiades semper toto cantabitur orbe:
Quamvis ingenio non valet, arte valet.'*

This criticism is well borne out by the present translation. The poem contains little imagination of the higher kind, but considerable artistic fancy. It is written in the mock-heroic mood of Pope's 'Rape of the Lock,' and its commencement reminds us curiously of Keats' verses to the 'Mermaid's Tavern,' the resort of Shakspeare and Jonson, where, in a similar spirit, he declares:

'I have heard that, on a day,
Mine host's signboard flew away,
Nobody knew whither; till
An astrologer's old quill
To a sheepskin gave the story—
Said he saw you in your glory
Underneath a new-old sign
Sipping beverage divine,
And pledging with contented smack
The Mermaid in the Zodiac.'

The same light ironical tone is visible in, and gives almost its only charm to, the present poem. The conception itself is mock-heroic. In detail, the great astronomer is introduced as knowing about all the luminaries of the firmament, the risings and obscurations of the stars, eclipses of the sun, and (mark the anti-climax) the love-affairs of the moon. The king goes out to mighty wars, a scarred veteran—of last night's love encounter. Note next the scepticism as to the genuineness of a bride's tears, and the playful badinage about the cause of Berenice's grief. A weak sister may weep for the departure of a soldier-brother, but will her anguish be so terrible as that of Berenice? Besides, Berenice was never weak, and the great instance of her strength of mind was shown in order to secure—her husband. Her grief, too, takes forms best expressed in the Lover's vocabulary. Then the Lock begins to exhibit its own vanity by the use of strong terms, mock-heroic, if words ever were so. It is vowed to the gods as the chief sacrifice—together with a hecatomb. The result of a great war is dismissed in a few words, our chief concern, of course, being to come to the fate of a ringlet. The Lock protests (swearing, too naturally, by the head it grew on) that it yielded only to irresistible force, and aids its grandiose phraseology magnis componendo parva, following with a general hatred of steel, very pardonable in a victim—of the shears. The Lock's apotheosis is next described in a highly exalted tone, emphasized by an ample use of proper names, by a comparison of itself to (no less an one than) Ariadne, and by a bombastic account of its present sublime position. A strong protest is added to show its continued devotion to its mistress, a condescension so worded as to make us feel

'Methinks our lady doth protest too much.'

Lastly, its present majesty is marked by the demand for solemn oblations (to be accepted, too, from chaste votaries only), and then is degraded by the confession that the reason for demanding these sacrificial offerings is—to make the other stars jealous.

44. progenies Thiae = ἡλίος. Cf. Pind. Is. iv. μᾶτερ ἁελίου Θεία. Others read Phthiae (as nearer to the MSS., Phitiae), but progenies would be obscure (standing, perhaps, for 'Macedonians'), and supervchitur would be used in the unusual nautical sense of 'weathering a point.' Cf. Liv. XLII. 43, superare; Verg. Aen. i. 244, Ecl. VIII. 6.

and xcvii. 2. A fragment of the original survives :

50. stringere = ‘make ductile,’ ‘draw into bars’ (stricturae).

51. abjunctae mea fata. Cf. Cicero, meas absentis preces ; Soph., τὰ μὰ δυστήνου κακά—a common construction, especially with ipse.

comae sorores, ‘my sister locks were moaning my ruin, who had just been severed from them.’

Ellis (less well) takes abjunctae with comae sorores.

52. cum se. ‘When there suddenly bore down upon me, beating the air with nodding plumes, Aethiopian Memnon’s only begotten brother, Locrian Arsinoe’s winged steed. He caught me up, and flew on his way through the shadows of the upper air, and laid me in Venus’ holy lap. On this errand had our Lady of Zephyrium, the Greek denizen of Canopus’ shores, despatched her own messenger ; that not only to thy honour, O god of wine, there should be fixed in heaven’s spangled floor a golden crown from Ariadne’s brows, but that I also should gleam there, the consecrated spoils of a princess’s auburn head,—therefore, passing damp from ocean to the quarters of the gods, I was made by the goddess to take my place as a new constellation among the old.’

53. unigena, ‘brother.’ Cf. LXIV. 301. Zephyrus is thus the son of Eos, the mother of Memnon. The representation of a wind as a ‘winged horse’ is found in Val. Flacc., ‘Thraces equi’ (the winds from Thrace), and in Verg., ‘Eois Euris equis.’ That Zephyrus is meant is confirmed by v. 57, ‘suum Zephyritis famulum.’

Another interpretation, which seems due to ‘too much learning,’ is given by Orelli. Arsinoe, wife of Ptolemy Philadelphus, is represented as riding on an ostrich, in a statue at Helicon. Probably there was a similar statue in the temple of Arsinoe-Venus, on the Libyan promontory of Zephyrium. Then Unigena Memnonis = the bird risen from the ashes of Memnon, and will be the ostrich. Ellis suggests another bird, a kind of hawk.

54. Arsinoe, wife of Ptolemy II., was deified as Arsinoe-Aphrodite. A temple was built to her on one of the promontories called Zephyrium: hence she is called Zephyritis, v. 57. There was a Zephyrium in the district of Cyrenae, anciently a Locrian settlement; hence perhaps the epithet Locridos (Elocridicos, MSS.).

P. 53. 58. Graia. The Ptolemies were of Macedonian descent.

incola litoribus. For construction cf. LXIV. 301, cultricem montibus Idri. Arsinoe must have had a temple near Canopus.

59. Hii dii uen ibi, MSS. The simplest emendation is 'Dive, tibi,' &c., i.e., Bacche, who is spoken of simply as deus once or twice in Virgil (cf. 'membra deo victus,' 'Munera laetitiamque dei,' Aen. I. 636); and the context here would prevent any ambiguity. [Looking at Hii Dii as one syllable reduplicated—a very common occurrence in all MSS.—this reading involves only the change of n to t.]

Ellis reads, 'Hic juveni Ismario' = Baccho.

63. uvidulum a fluctu. Why the Lock had to be 'dipped in the wave' is not clear, unless it was as part of the ceremony of its transformation. Orelli reads afflatu, Baehrens a luctu.

66. juxta. Ellis quotes contra from Ennius in Varro L. L. VII. 12. juncta Lycaonia is suggested. Lycaon was father of Callisto.

71. Rhamnusia virgo, LXIV. 396.

pace tua, 'with thy pardon.'

73. neq si, 'not even if the stars rend me with cruel words, for truthfully unfolding the secrets of my breast.' Rossbach reads,

'Condita quin verei pectoris evoluam,' making tegam quin = 'hide so as not to.' In this he is generally followed: but there seems no call for correction of the text.

75. rebus, 'honours.'

77. If the text stand, there will be three ways of rendering it, all open to objection:

(1) 'With which head, in the old time when our mistress was a maiden, knowing no man, I drank many kinds of unguent.' This leaves a difficulty in the case of unguentis.

(2) 'With whom, as I was a stranger to all unguents while Berenice was in the former time of her virginity, so I have since drained in her company unguents many a thousand' (Ellis). But there is no evidence that, even in the exceptional country of Egypt, maidens avoided unguents, which they certainly used in Greece. Ellis' quotation of the proverb, δολερὰ μὲν τὰ εἴματα δολερὰ δὲ τὰ χρίματα, would be as fatal to the use of clothes as of ointments by virgins.

(3) 'With whom, in the old days of her virginity, I—deprived now of all unguents—drank many thousand kinds.' This requires a nunc with expers to make it quite clear. [The nunc might be found by an emendator who chose to read nunc a for una.]

'Grammatici certant et adhuc sub iudice lis est.'

80. post, 'henceforth.'

82. quin, for MSS. quam, Lachmann. 'Without your cup of onyx pouring out to me the gifts I love.'

P. 54. 90. festis luminibus, 'with a festival of torches,' λυχνοκαΐα. A weaker rendering is 'on holidays.'

92. effice. 'Rather by your bounteous oblations give cause for the stars to exclaim again and again, "May I become a Royal Tress! then let Orion flash next Aquarius!"'

Ellis alters to affice muneribus, which he admits to be 'an expression of prose.' Then, like most editors, he has to begin a new sentence at sidera, involving change of text, loss of rhythm, and difficulties of tense sequence. He reads,

'*Sidera corruerent utinam, coma regia fiam,
Proximus Hydrochoi fulgeret Oarion,*'

where fulgeret is from fulgĕre: so Munro, who, however, prefers 'corruerint,' and then sees no irregularity, rendering 'though the stars shall all have to tumble down for it, I pray I may become again a royal lock. Orion, if he liked, might then shine next to Aquarius.' But none of the quotations to illustrate fulgeret (imperf. subj.) seem parallel. It is much simpler to take fulgeret as imperative present from fulgerare. Compare ἐμοῦ θανόντος γαῖα μιχθήτω πυρὶ· οὐδὲν μέλει μοι, τὰμὰ γὰρ καλῶς ἔχει.

94. Hydrochoi = Ὑδροχοεῖ. The meaning of the verse is, that each star, could it have its desire of becoming a royal lock gratified, would be indifferent to the utter confusion of its old abode, the heavens.

LXVIII A.

Much has been introduced into this poem by various commentators which seems hardly contained in the text; some of it reflecting on the character of Manlius, some adding to the blackness of Lesbia's character. If vv. 5, 6 meant that Manlius has just lost his young wife Vinia, the bride of LXI., then it would be brutal of Manlius to ask for consolation in the shape of the lighter sort of love-poems. If vv. 28, 29 meant that Lesbia was multiplying her immoralities, then Manlius was hardly acting as a man of the world, or even as a friend, in telling tales to Catullus in his absence from her. But both these interpretations of the text are arbitrary.

Manlius is staying at or near Verona, where Catullus is visiting his father's house, and is thus a sort of guest of Catullus. He writes to the poet saying he is in great distress (of what origin there is little to show, but probably in part from ill-health¹), and feels sadly the loss of his wife's society, and asks for some light modern literature or love-poems of Catullus' own to soothe his loneliness. Catullus replies that he cannot send love-poems of his own, because his taste for these has been checked and changed by his brother's recent death. So, too, Manlius' hint, that Verona is not a becoming place for a man of pleasure and of ton, is sadly answered. Nor can the poet send books, because he has left his library behind in Rome. Had he been able to grant, he would have anticipated, both requests of Manlius.

That Manlius was near Verona is shown by hospitis officium, v. 12, by hic, v. 28, answering Catullus' own word huc, v. 36, and by ultro deferrem; for how was Catullus likely to have taken books and poems to Manlius unasked, unless he had come, as a stranger or visitor requiring attention, into Catullus' neighbourhood?

¹ Cf. 'mortis limine,' v. 4. There were 'aquae' near Verona.

If Manlius' distress had arisen from the loss of his young bride, Catullus would probably have said something more distinct, and certainly would have sent in consolation something or something like his verses to Calvus on Quintilia's ‘summer fading’ (xcvi.).

1. Quod mittis, ‘Insomuch as you send,’ a prosaic phrase, repeated v. 27, like ‘quod . . . hoc fit quod,’ v. 33.

2. Conscriptum lacrimis, ‘this poor little letter written in tears,’ instead of ink.

3. ‘That I may lift you up, like a shipwrecked sailor cast ashore out of the sea's foaming billows, and rescue you from death's door.’

6. caelibe, ‘unshared.’

7. scriptorum, ‘poets.’

8. anxia pervigilat, ‘is kept awake all night with care.’

9. Id after the quotation (vv. 5-8) from Manlius' letter, as again v. 30.

10. Munera, ‘and look to me for the pleasures of love and song at once,’ i.e., love-poems.

12. hospitis officium, ‘nor fancy that I am averse to my hospitable duties.’ Another rendering is, ‘remember without gratitude the kindness of your roof,’ cf. LXVIII B. 28 (68); but this depends on the exploded opinion that the Manlius of this poem is the same as the Allius of the next.

14 41. dona beata, ‘what the happy alone can give.’

15. vestis pura, ‘the white toga of manhood,’ the assumption of which made the youth his own master.

16. ‘When my youth, in its flower, enjoyed a genial spring.’ Cf. xvii. 14.

17. lusi, ‘I loved and sang enough’ (cf. l. 2 note), ‘and made myself known to the goddess who flavours the cup of passion with a sweet bitterness.’ Cf. LXIV. 96, II. 10 note.

19. hoc studium, 'all my taste for this,' 'all my enthusiasm for this,' like 'ea fama' = 'report of that,' 'illa cura' = 'care for that,' but differing from haec studia, v. 26.

P. 55. 21. commoda, 'happiness.' Lines 19-24 are nearly repeated LXVIII B. 52-56.

25. 'Since my brother died, I have routed from every corner of my mind these tastes and all pretty triflings of the spirit.'

27. 'It is unhandsome, Catullus, for you to stay at Verona, where every man of better stamp can scarcely unchill his frozen limbs in his lonely bed,' i.e., no amours, fit for a gentleman, are to be found here. You will lose caste by staying here.

28. quisquis de meliore nota, supply est hic. Munro understands Manlius to write from 'some place which was neither Rome nor Verona,' probably Baiae, and to say, 'It is a shame, Catullus, to be at Verona, because here where I am whoever is a man of fashion has been warming his limbs on the bed you have abandoned,' i.e., has 'affairs' with Lesbia. But frigida tepefactat (or tepefecit, Munro) membra cubili could surely never be said of Lesbia's favoured lovers, and indeed the words belong to the phraseology of unloved loneliness. Cf. v. 6, Propert. iv. 7, 6, 'quererer lecti frigida regna mei,' Ovid. Amor. III. 5, 42, 'Frigidus in vacuo destituere toro.' Cf. 'Frigidus in solo jactabam membra cubili.' Besides, Lesbia's bed could hardly have been called desertus (at any date) because Catullus was away. For desertus = solus = lonely, cf. LXIV. 134, 188. See, too, introduction to this poem.

30. 'That is not unhandsome, but rather pitiful.' Could non turpe possibly be said, even by Catullus, if Lesbia is referred to in v. 19?

magis = potius. Verg. Ecl. i. 11, 'Non equidem invideo, miror magis'; Lucr. II. 428, 869, &c.

33. Nam is often transitional, and here = 'with regard to your other request.'

36. capsula, 'small box' of cylindrical shape, capable of holding some half-a-dozen rolls. Cf. homo de capsula, ex capsula totus, of a man who looks as if he had just come 'out of a bandbox.'

37. maligna, 'niggardly.'

ingenuo, 'gentlemanly.'

39. utriusque, i.e., both books and poems.

copia posta est, 'lay before you a store.' Copiam ponere seems ἀπαξ λεγόμενον, but not impossible. Munro reads 'praesto est,' the best of the emendations proposed.

40. ultro deferrem, 'I would have offered them unasked.'

LXVIII B.

This poem is connected in the MSS. with the preceding epistle to Manlius. It is, however, addressed to Allius, who must have been a different person, for no one bore two gentile names. The form, too, is not epistolary, but that of a set, indeed rather complicated, composition. Observe the artificial arrangement by which the parts of the subject are repeated in reverse order: Allius—Lesbia—Laodamia—Troy—fraterna mors—Troy—Laodamia—Lesbia—Allius. So, but more naturally, in the episode of LXIV., the order of treatment is: Ariadne—Theseus—Ariadne—Theseus—Ariadne. Though this poem is guilty of ornate expansion—it was confectum carmine munus, a complimentary gift in return for a peculiar and rather exceptional favour—and though it is wanting in Catullus' natural symmetry and direct simplicity of expression, yet it contains lines which the world will not willingly 'let die,' such as 15-22, 30-32, 93-4, 119-20; and it is valuable as showing the 'transfiguring' power of Catullus' master-passion, by which Allius' act of dishonourable complaisance becomes worthy of immortalizing gratitude, and Clodia's gross infidelity to her husband demands her apotheosis. To Catullus, in a sadly wider sense than to Coleridge, 'All thoughts . . . are but ministers to love.' With Catullus, all who pass through the 'sacred flame' become alike: Lesbia may rank with Laodamia.

3. Ne, 'lest Time, in his flight of unmindful generations, cloak, in the blindness of night, this friendly act.' For ne Ellis reads nec (with MSS.), although he rejects the latter in spite of similar evidence (or error) elsewhere. Cf. v. 151.

The thought here and in v. 151 et seq. is the same as that which constantly recurs in Shakspeare's sonnets. Stone will moulder, brass will rust; but verse will outlive both.

6. carta anus. Cf. 'fama loquatur anus,' LXVII. 10.

8. 'May Allius, even after death, grow greater and greater in renown.'

P. 56. 9. sublimis. 'Nor the high-flying spider weave his gossamer web, and ply his trade on Allius' uncared-for name.' Sublimis, cf. Hes. Er. 755, ἀερσιπότῆτος ἀράχνης.

11. Amathusia. Amathus, on the south coast of Cyprus, had a celebrated temple of Aphrodite, who is named from her city, as in Erycina, Paphia (so Patareus, Ἀθηναίη).

duplex, 'wily,' like duplicis Ulyxei, Hor. Od. i. vi.

12. corruerit, 'and how fiercely she convulsed me.' Cf. Lucr. v. 368:

'Corruere hanc rerum violento turbine summam.'

Possibly the word might mean 'fell upon me.' Cf. Hor. Od. i. xix. 9. 'In me tota ruens Venus.' Munro alters to torruerit.

13. Trinacria rupes = Aetna.

14. lymphaque, 'or the water.' Cf. VII. 2 note.

15. tabescere, 'melt.' Cf. LXIV. 243.

17. Qualis. If this simile apply to the tears (which from hic 23 it would seem to do), then the latter part is an Homeric extension of the picture beyond the occasion (cf. II. ix. 14:

ἵστατο δακρυχέων ὥστε κρήνη μελάνυδρος ἢ τε κ.τ.λ.);

for the 'relief of tears' can hardly be meant.

If the simile refer, like that of 23-5, to the welcome assistance given by Allius (and this seems to give a better sense), the hic 23 is rather hard. We should have expected sic or ac.

perlucens, 'gleaming,' as a mountain stream, seen from a distance, appears like a bright line; or, in the common sense of the word, 'transparent.'

19. valle, 'rolled headlong down the sloping gorge.'

21. lasso is probably to be taken with viatori, for lasso in sudore involves a personification which belongs rather to the style of later Latinity.

22. gravis, 'crushing heat.' Cf. II. 8, gravis ardor.

hiulcat, 'makes to gape,' i.e., crack with dryness. Cf. Verg. Geor. II. 363:

'Hoc, ubi hiulca siti findit canis aestifer arva.'

23. hic, 'when I suffered thus.'

nigro, 'a hurricane black with clouds.' 'Ater turbo,' Verg. Aen. X. 603.

25. Jam . . . jam, 'at one time . . . at another time.' Cf. Verg. Aen. IV. 157:

'jamque hos cursu, jam praeterit illos.' prece Pollucis, 'prayer to Pollux.' Cf. Verg. Aen. II. 31, 'donum exitiale Minervae' = the gift to Minerva.

implorata (nominative), 'won by prayer.'

29. quam refers to domum. Isque dedit dominam has crept into the sentence a little before its time—see note on v. 108. Munro reads dominae. The connection of domum—dominam, and also the parallel words in the adieu v. 116 show that dominam is not Lesbia, who is never apparently so called, but the lady of the house, whose connivance and assistance was all important.

30. 'Hither my lustrous goddess softly drew, and on the polished threshold checked her glistening foot, rising on her creaking sandal.' The creaking was a good omen.

32. innixa. Cf. 'pictis innixa cothurnis,' Ov. Am. III. i. 31.

34. Protesilaeam, 'of Protesilaus,' the first Greek to leap ashore at Troy, and therefore (by an oracle) doomed to immediate death, which he met at the hands of a Trojan.

35. inceptam frustra, 'that house, begun never to be finished.' Homer, in speaking of Protesilaus (Il. II. 601) has the same thought: ἐλέλειπτο καὶ ὅμος ἡμιτελής. Others read incepto (i.e., amore), 'love begun but to be balked.'

sanguine sacro, 'the blood of sacrifice.'

eros, 'our lords in heaven.'

37. 'May I set my heart too strongly upon nothing that is rashly to be undertaken against the pleasure of heaven!'

Rhamnusia virgo. LXVI. 71, LXIV. 396.

P. 57. 39. jejuna, 'how fiercely the starved altar craves the blood of oblation.'

42. una atque altera, 'one winter and yet another.'

44. abrupto is an old form of abrepto (Munro).

45. Quod, 'this severance (by death) of her husband the Fates knew was not far distant, should he once have gone in arms to Troy.' abisse is read in most MSS., and is taken as 'perfect for future'; and then Quod refers, not (as above) to the general verbal idea of abrupto conjugio, but to conjugio, her husband, 'who, the Fates knew, would depart in death very soon.' But this forces both the tense and meaning of abisse.

scibant. Cf. LXIV. 320 custodibant, LXXXIV. 8.

50. acerba cinis, 'untimely pyre of men and of all manliness.'

51. Quae vel et id. MSS. vetet id. Munro taetre id. Ellis Qualiter id. 'Troy, that brought the same untimely pitiful death even on my brother too.'

52-60 are nearly repeated from LXVIII A. 19-24.

58. compositum, 'so far away, not laid to rest in the midst of familiar tombs, by the side of kindred dust, but buried in the abominable, ill-starred realm of Troy, you are imprisoned by a foreign land on the last margin of its soil.'

63. libera otia, 'take his ease unchecked in a peaceful bower.' Cf. Hor. Od. I. xv. 16:

'Nequiquam thalamo graves
Hastas et calami spicula Gnosii
Vitabis strepitumque.'

67. tanto, 'in so mighty a whirlpool did love's tempestuous tide engulf you, and bear you down into its sheer abyss—such an abyss as, in the Greek story, near the city of Pheneus, at the foot of Cyllene, drained the marsh and dried the rich soil; that abyss, to have dug which, breaking through the marrow of the mountain, is the glory of the falsely-styled son of Amphitryon.' Heracles was son of Jove and Alcmena, the wife of Amphitryon.

P. 58. 70. sicare is Schrader's certain correction of MSS. sicari, which makes nonsense. The 'oozy soil' does not come into the comparison, the only point of which is the vastness of the barathrum.

audit = ἀκούει = 'has the repute,' as male audire = 'to have a bad reputation,' but the construction with the infinitive is a remarkable Grecism. So falsiparens is an imitation of ψευδοπάτωρ.

73. monstra, 'when with his unerring arrow he struck down the monstrous Stymphalian birds, at the tyrannical bidding of an unworthy taskmaster,' i.e., Eurystheus.

74. deterioris eri. Cf. Odys. XI. 621, πολὺ χείρονι φωτὶ Δεδμήμην, ὁ δέ μοι χαλεποὺς ἐπετέλλετ' αἰθλους.

78. tuum, MSS. Heyse emends

Quae tamen indomitam ferre jugum domuit,

'which taught you, though indomitable, to bear the yoke.' Tamen then intensifies indomitam (see Munro's note on Lucr. III. 553). Ellis' dominum domitum misses the point, which is the depth and strength of Laodamia's love.

79. 'Not so dear to a life-weary father is the head of a late-born grandson, his only daughter's nursling, who has come at last, after long delay, to inherit his grandsire's wealth, and has given a name to be entered in the witnessed tablets; who banishes the unnatural joys of the mocked next-of-kin, and scares the bird of prey from the hoary head.'

83. derisi. Cf. Hor. Sat. II. v. 55 :

'Captatorque dabit risus Nasica coronae.'

84. volturium was the nickname given to legacy-hunters, who wait, like vultures, by the side of the dying. Cf. Plaut. Trin. 100:

'Turpilucricupidum te vocant cives tui :

Tum autem sunt alii qui te volturium vocant.'

86. compar, 'mate.' improbius, 'more unconscionably.'

87. decerpere, 'snatch kisses with nipping bill.'

88. multivola, 'than the most passionate-hearted woman.'
 ἀπαξ λεγ.

89. tu, Laodamia. furores, 'fevered love.'

aut nihil aut paulo = literally 'if not in nothing, then in little.' Cf. XXII. 4 note.

96. furta, 'frailties,' v. 100. verecundae, 'decorous.'

97. stultorum, 'the slaves of jealousy.' Stultus is specially used of 'that jealous fool,' the husband.

P. 59. 99. in culpa, 'on account of her lord's infidelity.'

contudit iram, 'smothered her burning wrath.' Cf. Hor. Od. iv. iii. 8: 'tumidas contuderit minas.' The MSS. read quotidiana, emended by Lachmann to concoquit iram.

100. omnivoli furta, 'the frailties of Jove in his all-grasping desire.'

101. quia nec, 'But—since it is wrong even to compare men with gods—drop the thankless task of the palsied sire.'

Between 101 and 102 a loss of verses has been supposed, the estimates of which vary from 2 to 18 vv. The connection of thought is not quite simple, but seems to be this: Catullus has been urging himself to forgive his mistress' errors, by quoting to himself the precedent of Juno. If the queen of heaven can forgive her husband, sure a poet can forgive his mistress. Then he checks this comparison as profane, and, taking a lower key, calls on himself not to play the part of the 'comicus stultus senex,' constantly suspicious and unhappy.

103. tamen, 'besides.' Cf. Munro on Lucr. v. 1177.

deducta, i.e., like a bride.

105. munuscula furtiva, 'forbidden joys.'

mira, 'that night of nights.' Munro decides that the alteration to muta is unquestionably right.

'Quid respondemus, nisi justam intendere litem Naturam?'

107. unus, Lachmann with a few MSS. It seems more appropriate than unis, which is against the spirit of 95 et seq.

108. dies is rather out of place. Cf. supra v. 28, LXIV. 9, LXVI. 18. lapide candidiore, 'with a brighter stone.' CIL. 6 note.

109. quod potui, 'it is all I can give.' Cf. Verg. Ecl. III. 70.

111. vestrum.! 'That the name of your family may not be overswept with mouldering rust by this day or to-morrow or all the days to come.' Compare 'To-morrow and to-morrow and to-morrow.'

114. Antiquis plis, 'to the good in old times.'

115. tua vita = 'your beloved.' Cf. XLV. 13.

116. domina, 'the mistress of the house.' Who she was is obscure, perhaps the same as tua vita; and then the latter will be Allius' wife. Cf. 28 note.

117. terram dedit aufert, MSS. te et eram dedit Afer, Munro; rem confidit Anser, Ellis; dedit auctor, Rossbach; nobis taedam dedit Anser, Baehrens; terram dedit Anser, Heyse. Aufert is manifestly corrupt, and very probably contains a proper name, the owner of which will, in that case, be the friend who introduced Catullus to Allius. omnia bona, LXXVII. 4.

Hor. Od. III. xxvii. 50:

'O deorum

Si quis haec audis,'

and in the dramatists, 'Aperite aliquis actutum ostium.'

Desine quisquam, literally 'Cease any one.' 'Perish any man's desire to deserve well of any; perish every fancy that perchance some one may be won to gratitude.'

3. ingrata, 'all services are unrequited, and it is now no pleasure to do kindnesses, but rather increase of weariness and suffering.'

4. Jam juvat is supplied by Munro.

5. urget, 'persecutes.'

6. modo, 'a little while ago.'

This Rufus is probably M. Caelius Rufus, the correspondent of Cicero, and Catullus' rival in the favour of Lesbia. From Cicero's defence of him we learn most about Clodia's profligacy.

P. 62. 3. subrepsti. LXXVI. 2. For the form, see on XIV. 14.

4. omnia bona. LXVIII B. 118. = Catullus' happiness with Lesbia.

6. nostrae pectus amicitiae. The passages quoted by Ellis, 'fidae pectus amicitiae' (Mart. IX. xiv. 2), 'almae pectus amicitiae' (Stat. Sil. IV. iv. 102) are not parallel, as they are simply cases of descriptive genitive. Here the notion is, 'the breast my friendship leaned upon.' Pectus is an obvious suggestion.

LXXXII.

3. ei, monosyllabic, as in the dramatists.

4. seu quid. Cf. XIII. 10 note: 'or than that dearer treasure—if there be such—than eyes.' For the sentiment, compare Herrick:

'Thou art my life, my love, my heart,
The very eyes of me.'

LXXXIII.

1. viro. If (as is certain) Lesbia be Clodia, this will be Metellus Celer.

2. fatuo. 'This the insensate fool enjoys most heartily.'

3. nihil sentis. 'You have no perception.' Cf. XII. 3, XVII. 20.

4. sana. 'If she forgot me and said nothing, her heart would be whole; as it is, her carping and her talking at me not only prove that I am in her mind, but—a much more potent fact—that she is angered.'

6. uritur. Cf. LXI. 173.

LXXXIV.

Although the pronunciation of the aspirate, at the end of the Republic, seems, according to Cicero (Orator XLVIII., &c.) to have varied according to quickly changing fashion; and although a difference was made between the vulgarity of aspirating vowels and aspirating consonants; yet extravagance in both appears to have been condemned as a popular error. Arrius, it is to be remarked, errs in both ways, and Catullus affirms the error to have been traditional in his less than undistinguished family. Hence the vulgarity of speech attaching to Arrius was similar to that now found in the uneducated provincial or the cockney.

1. chommoda, 'whinnings'; and so hinsidias, 'hambush.' Commoda is a military term.

si quando, 'whenever.'

3. mirifice, 'thought himself a prodigy of pronunciation.'

4. quantum poterat, 'with all his force.'

5. credo. 'Well he might.'

7. requierant, 'our ears had a general holiday.'

8. leniter et leviter, 'smoothly and softly spoken.'

9. postilla, 'after a little while ceased to fear.'

10. horribilis, 'then came the chilling news.'

P. 63. 1. multis, 'in the judgment of many.'

XCV.

P. 64. Catullus' friend, and companion in Bithynia (x. 29), C. Helvius Cinna, appears to have been a poet of the Alexandrine school. His chief poem was the 'Smyrna,' mentioned here, dealing with the love of Myrrha and Cinyras. Its obscurity was such that great glory accrued to the critics who were able to explain it (Philargyrius on Verg. Ecl. ix. 35). Virgil seems to have respected Cinna's poetical power:

'Nam neque adhuc Varro videor nec dicere Cinna Digna.'

Only two consecutive lines of Cinna remain :

*'Te matutinus flentem conspexit Eous,
Et flentem vidit paulo post Hesperus idem.'*

These lines seem to have suggested Tennyson's

*'Her tears fell with the dews at even ;
Her tears fell ere the dews were dried ;
She could not look on the sweet heaven,
Either at morn or eventide.'*

3. Hortensius. Cf. LXV. 2. Ovid. Tr. II. 441 :

'Nec minus Hortensi nec sunt minus improba Servi Carmina.'

Aul. Gell. XIX. 9, condemns both Hortensius and Cinna :

'Hortensius invenusta et Cinna illepidi . . . fecerunt.'

Munro, wishing the contrast throughout the poem to be between Cinna and Volusius, would read 'Hatrianus' = 'the native of Hatria,' in the marshy district at the mouths of the Po.

5. Satrachi, a Cyprian river, connected with the tale of Myrrha.

cavas, 'deep-bedded.'

6. cana, 'hoar centuries,' i.e., of the distant future.

pervolüent, 'turn the pages.'

7. Volusi. XXXVI. 1.

Paduam. 'At the Padua, their very birthplace.' The Padua was an affluent of the Po.

8. scombris, 'furnish slack wraps for mackerel.'

9. monumenta, 'memorials,' 'remains.'

The lacuna seems to require the name of some Greek poet, and has been variously supplied : Phanoclis (Roszbach), Philetæ (Bergk), Phalæci (Munro). Ellis reads sodalis (from x. 28). Some (inferior) MSS. read laboris.

10. Antimacho, 'swollen Antimachus,' the lengthiest of epic poets, a contemporary of Plato.

XCVI.

On the death of Quintilia, wife of Calvus. Compare Propertius II. xxxiii. 89, 90:

*'Haec etiam docti confessa est pagina Calvi,
Cum caneret miseræ funera Quintiliae.'*

3. Quum. [Ellis reads quo desiderio in apposition with dolore.] 'When in fond regret we recast old loves, and weep for the friendships we bade farewell to long ago.'

4. missas. Munro prefers amissas with Statius.'

XCIX.

mellite, 'honied.' Cf. XLVIII., 'Mellitos oculos tuos, Juventi,' and III. 6.

3. non tuli, 'my deed cost me dear.' LXXVII. 9.

amplius horam, 'for more than an hour I was impaled on the top of the cross.' Cf. Verg. Ecl. III. 105:

'Tres pateat caeli spatium non amplius ulnas.'

5. purgo, 'excuse myself.'

6. tantillum, 'ever so little of your cruel anger.'

vestrae. Cf. LXVIII.B. 111 note.

8. abstersisti (abstersti, Ellis). 'You moistened your lips with many a drop, and rubbed them clean with every finger, lest any infection from my mouth should remain, as if it had been an unclean she-wolf's revolting slaver.'

For elision between the first and second half of the Pentameter see Appendix I. ad fin.

P. 65. 10. lupae might have the not uncommon meaning of meretricis here; but this is not necessary.

11. infesto, 'cast me over to the mercy of my cruel foeman, Love.' Ellis reads infestum: see CXVI. 4 note.

13. jam, 'presently.'

15. proponis. CIX. 1.

CI.

See General Introduction II.

7. interea is difficult. It seems to mean, 'till I can do more.' Rossbach emends to 'in terra hac.' The gifts were perhaps a lock of hair, flowers, &c.

10. ave atque vale, the formula of farewell to the dead. So Aeneas says, at Pallas' funeral, Aen. XI. 97 :

'Salve aeternum mihi, maxime Palla, Aeternumque vale.'

CII.

1. tacito cujus animi. 'If a true friend ever entrusted aught to the silent keeping of another, whose deep-seated loyalty was known to the core, you both shall find me sworn by their oath, and must believe me to have become the very god of silence.'

3. illorum, not tacitorum quorum fides nota sit (Ellis), but the two true sworn friends, between whom the secret is held. Munro alters to tacite, and refers the plural illorum to the generic notion contained in fido amico, a construction of which of course there are plenty of examples (cf. LXIV. 146 note) in both Greek and Latin. But this seems to spoil the point of 'tacito—Harpocratem'; and v. 2 would be rather a feeble amplification of fido, whereas it goes excellently with tacito in sense, making both the amici to be fidi, and so leading up to their union in illorum. For tacito used practically as a substantive, cf. LXIV. 176 note.

meque et. Cf. LXXVI. 11, teque et.

4. Harpocratem. LXXIV. 4 = the god of silence.

puta. Remark the rare collocation of imperative with indicative (invenies).

CVII.

1. Si cui quid proprie. 'If ever answer came to anxious prayer, when hope was gone, then is it welcome, in the truest sense, to the soul.'

168 NOTES. CVII., 3-7. CVIII. CIX. CXIV.

P. 66. 3. carius auro corrects gratum, 'nay, more precious than gold.'

5-8. For the form of these lines, cf. IX. 5 and 10-11.

6. lucem nota. Cf. LXVIII B. 108 (148). Cf. Hor. Od. I. xxxvi. 10:

'Cressa ne careat pulchra dies nota.'

7. hac me est optandus vita. So MSS. 'Who is more ideally blest in this life than me,' 'more to be envied.' Ellis reads,

'ab dis

Optandum in vita dicere quis poterit?'

Remark that Catullus uses ego and nos quite indifferently—not only here, but elsewhere; but not tu and vos (yet vester = tuus, cf. LXVIII B. 111).

CVIII.

1. Comini. This man has been identified, very probably, with P. Cominius, of whom Cicero speaks (pro Cluent. xxxvi.), 'quo accusante defendi C. Cornelium'; and this Cornelius may have been Catullus' friend, addressed in CII. 4.

populi arbitrio. 'If the people were to choose what death to inflict on your white but sin-stained age.'

3. inimica bonorum, 'the assailant of virtue.'

4. exsecta. Lachmann: cf. effossos. Ellis reads exerta = 'protruding,' which has perhaps a little more MS. authority, but not much meaning.

CIX.

1. Jucundum perpetuumque. 'You hold out to me the promise that this our mutual love shall be full of joy and never fail.' Proponis, XCIX. 15.

5. perducere, 'continue unbroken.'

CXIV.

Mentula (xxix. 13) is identified with Mamurra, the 'fraudulent bankrupt of Formiae' (XLIII. 5). As a favourite officer of Caesar, he seems to have employed his opportunities to amass wealth. Cicero, in a letter to Atticus (VII. vii. 6), speaks of Mamurra's wealth, with bitterness. His luxury, however, ('primus parietes aedium marmoreis laminis praetexit, solido marmore columnas erexit,') and his debauchery (XXIX. XLI.) seem to have left him always poor. From this poem and the next it appears that he obtained a saltus (i.e., an assignation of 800 jugera of land) near Firmum, a town of Picenum; but that only a small portion of this estate was lucrative. Compare CXV.:

' *Mentula habet instar triginta jugera prati,
 Quadraginta arvi; cetera sunt maria.
 Cur non divitiis Croesum superare potis sit,
 Uno qui in saltu tot bona possideat—
 Prata, arva, ingentes silvas latasque paludes
 Usque ad Hyperboreos et mare ad Oceanum.*

Catullus satirises here his greed, his lasciviousness, and his poverty.

1. Firmano saltu (Firmanus saluis, MSS.) 'on the strength of his Firman allotment.'

3. omne genus, indeclinable and used adverbially: 'flying game and fish of every kind, meadows, cornlands, and ground game.'

4. fructus, 'he exceeds his returns by his expenditure.'

5. concedo. 'Therefore I grant he is rich, if you will grant that he wants everything: let us admire the many acres, so long as the master lacks one measure.'

6. modo. There is a play on the two senses of modus: (1) a 'measure of land,' (2) moral 'measure,' 'self-control.' The final syllable of modo is shortened in the hiatus. Cf. Verg. Ecl. VIII. 108, Aen. VI. 507, LV. 4, X. 27.

CXVI.

P. 67. 1. studioso (Munro would read studiose). 'Though my mind is often diligent in the chase, as I search how I may send to you poems of Callimachus, that by their means I may make you gentle to me, and prevent your striving in hostility to shoot your shafts full upon my head—now I discover,' &c.

2. Battiadae, LXV. 16.

4. infeste (infesta, MSS). Ellis reads infestum, which he takes as passive—‘the object of hostility’—as in xcix. 11. (against the best MSS.) In usque, iv. 24.

7. contra, ‘your hopes shall be baulked: your shafts I brush aside with a fold of my cloak, but mine shall pierce you through, and you shall pay for your sin in pains.’

dabis = dabi’. Catullus nowhere else makes this elision, so common (not only in earlier poets, but) in his contemporary Lucretius.

APPENDIX I.

THE VERSIFICATION OF CATULLUS.

A. More than a third of Catullus' poems are written in the HENDECASYLLABIC metre. This metre is ascribed to the invention and known by the name of PHALAECUS, and one epigram of his is extant in the Anthology. It was used by Sappho, Anacreon, and (mixed with other metres) by Callimachus and Theocritus. It is the metre of part of the Athenian drinking-song :

ἐν μύρτου κλαδί τὸ ξίφος φορήσω.

There are about 542 hendecasyllables in Catullus, and the scheme is:

(α)	/	—		/	—	—	/	—	—	/	—	—	/	—	—
(β)	—	—		—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
(γ)	—	—		—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—

The poems written in this metre are I.-III., V.-VII., IX., X., XII.-XVI., XXI., XXIV., XXVII., XXVIII., XXXII., XXXIII., XXXV., XXXVI., XXXVIII., XL.-XLIII., XLIV.-L., LIII.-LVIII.

(α) is by far the commonest form, and is rigidly followed by the only other great master of hendecasyllables, Martial.

(β) occurs about 33 times: I., VI. (?), XXI., XXXII. (bis), XXXV. (bis), XXXVI. (bis), XXXVII. (bis), XL., XLI. (bis), XLII. (septies), XLV. (quater), XLVII., XLIX. (bis), L., LIV., LVII.

(γ) occurs also 33 times: I., II., III., XII., XXVI. (bis), XXXII. (quater), XXXV. (ter), XXXVI. (ter), XXXVIII. (bis), XL. (bis), XLI. (bis), XLII. (ter), XLV. (ter), XLIX. (bis), LIII., LIV., LV.

In LV. after the base (or first foot) a spondee is found, in place of the usual dactyl, in 15 vv.

One verse (XL. 1) is perhaps hypermetrical: but v. note.

B. IAMBICS.

(i.) There are in Catullus 55 TRIMETERS (IV., XXIX., LII.), in which the pure iambic foot alone is used, with the exception of LII. 2, 3, both of which verses begin with a spondee. The tribrach in XXIX. 23 (4th foot) is almost certainly a false reading. In IV., XXIX. the coincidence of verbal and metrical accent is remarkable (except IV. 5, 6, 9, XXIX. 15, 21). For Caesura see (iii.) below.

(ii.) One poem (XXV.) is composed of Iambic TETRAMETERS CATALECTIC, in which vv. 3, 4, 5, 7, 9, 10, 13, have a spondee in the first place, and vv. 5, 13 a spondee in the fifth place, or rather first place of the second half of the verse.

(iii.) In the SCAZON or CHOLIAMBIC (= 'Limping Iambic') metre of Hipponax, employed by Callimachus and Theocritus, but little used by Latin poets before Catullus, are written VIII., XXII., XXXI., XXXVII., XXXIX., XLIV., LIX., LX.—in all 131 vv. The pure scheme occurs only 13 times; 29 vv. have a spondee in the first place, 13 vv. have a spondee in the third place, and 74 a spondee in both first and third places. A tribrach — — —, allowed by Martial in the third or fourth place, is only found once (XXII. 19) in the second place; and once (LIX. 3) the third foot is a dactyl. In XXXVII. 5 the first foot is a spondee (confūtvere),¹ not a dactyl (confūtūere). 'In Catullus' iambics and scazons, which have the hepthemimeral caesura, the end of the second foot must coincide with the end of a word.' (Munro.) IV. 4, XXIX. 22 are only apparent exceptions, for there the preposition is separable from the verb.

C. GLYCONEO-PHERECRATEAN.

(i.) The PRIAPEAN² metre is a system (= stanza) composed of

¹ This was kindly pointed out to me by Mr. Munro.

CARMEN XIX.

*Hunc ego, juvenes, locum villulamque palustrem
Tectam vimine junceo caricisque manipulis,
Quercus arida rustica conformata securi,
Nutrivi magis et magis ut beata quotannis.
Hujus nam domini colunt me deumque salutant
Pauperis tuguri pater filiusque,*

one glyconic followed by one pherecratean verse. The synapheia is observed, i.e., there is no metrical pause between the end of the first and the beginning of the second verse, and so, should a glyconic end with a vowel, the vowel must be elided, if the pherecratean open with a vowel. This system, in which XVII. (26 vv.) is composed, is generally printed as one long line—but see on (ii.) and (iii.) below. The scheme is Glyconic.

Phrecreatean.

$$\frac{1}{2} \cup \frac{1}{2} \cup \cup \frac{1}{2} \cup \frac{1}{2} \mid \frac{1}{2} \cup \frac{1}{2} \cup \cup \frac{1}{2} \cup$$

In this poem, however, the base (or first two syllables, or first foot) of the glyconic is a spondee in 9 cases; that of the pherecratean, also, is twice a spondee.

(ii.) In xxxiv. (24 vv.) three glyconics precede the pherecratean, and the synapheia is observed throughout the system. The base of the glyconic is 8 times spondaic, thrice iambic; that of the pherecratean is once iambic.

(iii.) The epithalamium (LXI.) is composed in a system of four glyconics and a pherecratean, in which of course the synapheia is observed. The apparent exceptions to the law of the synapheia, in which a vowel or short syllable precedes 'Io Hymen Hymenaeae io' are removed by the pronunciation of the first io as 'yo,' which is more than probably correct. In v. 223 omnibus ends the verse, and the next begins with a vowel: but Catullus may have followed ancient usage in making the final syllable long, or (more probably) such an emendation as the interchange of insciis and omnibus, or the substitution of obviis for omnibus is required, in this, the only exceptional case in 235 vv. It is to be remarked also that the name 'Aurunculeia' is divided between two glyconics. The base of the glyconic is 13 or 14 times a spondee, that of the pherecratean is twice so. One pherecratean (v. 25) replaces the usual dactyl by a spondee.

D. Catullus has written two Sapphic poems (XI., LI. = 40 vv.), and follows the original metre; so differing from Horace who elaborated for himself an almost rigid system, capable of few variations.¹ Comparing LI. with the original poem of Sappho, we find that Sappho twice begins a verse with trochaic syzygy (— — — —), Catullus once (13); three times ends a verse with a trochee, Catullus twice; twice breaks up a word between the third verse and the Adonic ($\overset{!}{—} — — \overset{!}{—} —$) which concludes the system, Catullus never; nine times she has caesura after a later syllable than the fifth, Catullus twice; thrice ends a verse with a monosyllable, and Catullus thrice. In XI. he begins a verse with a trochaic syzygy twice, once ends a verse with a trochee, three times divides a word between two verses, and eight times has the late caesura. Hence we may fairly conclude that the scheme of both Sappho and Catullus admitted two forms, of which (α) alone is Horatian; that both preferred (or at least freely admitted) the late caesura, which is much rarer in Horace; that the monosyllabic ending, so much avoided by Horace, was not unwelcome to them; and that synapheia, and the consequent division of a word between two verses (of which only three examples are found in Horace), was normal with them. Like the hexameter, therefore, in the hands of Virgil, the Sapphic under Horace's treatment seems to have been Romanised—that is to say, to have become less elastic and more regular; but the lyric metre suffered much more and gained much less than the epic metre in its admission to the 'Latinitas.'

E. The CHORIAMBIC metre (Sapphic sixteen-syllable, or greater Asclepiad), employed by Sappho and Alcaeus, and, after Catullus, once or twice by Horace—who, as usual, more rigidly, requires the end of the two first choriambi to coincide with the end of a word—is only represented by xxx. The verse consists of a dissyllabic base (a spondee, except in v. 9, where it is a trochee), followed by three choriambes, and ended by two short syllables. The scheme is

$\frac{1}{2} = \frac{1}{2}$ $\frac{1}{3} = \frac{1}{3}$ $\frac{1}{4} = \frac{1}{4}$ $\frac{1}{5} = \frac{1}{5}$ $\frac{1}{6} = \frac{1}{6}$ $\frac{1}{7} = \frac{1}{7}$ $\frac{1}{8} = \frac{1}{8}$ $\frac{1}{9} = \frac{1}{9}$ $\frac{1}{10} = \frac{1}{10}$

F. The 'Attis' (LXIII.) is written in a metre which seems to have been peculiar to poems of which the subject was the worship of Cybele. This metre, with less than his usual success in his imitations of classical metres (unfortunately so brief), has been employed by the Poet Laureate in 'Boadicea.' But the failure is more than pardonable, for the origin and development of the verse are still wrapped in obscurity. We are told by Hephaestion—our great metrical authority—that the system originally consists of an Ionic Tetrameter Catalectic, and that its name GALLIAMBIC has arisen from its special employment. The simple scheme would then be

Such a verse, however, is not found in this poem. If, however, we replace the Ionic a minore by an Ionic a majore in the first and third place, thus:—

$\begin{array}{ccccccc} \cup & \cup & - & - & \cup & \cup & - & - \\ - & - & \cup & \cup & \cup & \cup & - & - \end{array} \parallel \begin{array}{ccccccc} \cup & \cup & - & - & \cup & \cup & \cup & \cup \\ - & - & \cup & \cup & \cup & \cup & \cup & \cup \end{array}$ we can scan v. 18; and this suggests a clue. Granting that two short syllables may be the metrical equivalent of one long syllable, and vice versa, we obtain the following scheme, which will scan every line :—

	α				β
1.	\sim	\sim	$-$	$-$	$ $	\sim	\sim	$-$	$-$	$ $	\sim	\sim	$-$	$-$	$ $	\sim	\sim	\sim
2.	$-$	$-$	\sim	\sim	$ $	\sim	\sim	$-$	$-$	$ $	$-$	$-$	\sim	\sim	$ $	\sim	\sim	\sim
3.	\sim	\sim	$-$	\sim	$ $	\sim	\sim	$-$	$-$	$ $	\sim	\sim	$-$	\sim	$ $	\sim	\sim	\sim
4.	\sim	\sim	\sim	\sim	$ $	\sim	\sim	$-$	$-$	$ $	\sim	\sim	\sim	\sim	$ $	\sim	\sim	\sim
5.	\sim	\sim	$-$	\sim	$-$	\sim	$-$	$-$	$-$	$ $	\sim	\sim	$-$	\sim	$-$	\sim	\sim	\sim
6.	$-$	$-$	\sim	$-$	\sim	$-$	$-$	$-$	$-$	$ $	$-$	$-$	\sim	$-$	\sim	\sim	\sim	\sim
7.	\sim	\sim	\sim	\sim	$-$	\sim	$-$	$-$	$-$	$ $	\sim	\sim	\sim	\sim	$-$	\sim	\sim	\sim

Thus the first half of vv. 1, 2, 3, answers to α, scheme 5; the second half to ε, scheme 3: v. 77 answers wholly to scheme 3: v. 22 to scheme 2: and so on. One difficulty remains. This metre is said to be subject to anacalasis. The exact force of this word is still a subject of conjecture; but in this usage it seems to refer to the phenomenon seen in scheme 5, 6, 7, where a short syllable, apparently belonging to the second Ionic, seems to have 'broken itself back,' or 'bent itself back,' so as to become inserted before the last long syllable of the first Ionic; the same thing also occurring in the latter half of the verse. But the simpler explanation of the fact (as revealed by the present poem) is to refer this phenomenon to a resolution of — into — —, followed (though this is a metrical license requiring illustration) by a converse reunion or consolidation of another — — (the one — obtained by the resolution, the other — previously existing next to it in the verse), into a new —. Whatever be the theoretical explanation, the above scheme will make the scansion of every verse in this poem practically clear.

G. Two poems (LXII., LXIV.) contain 474 HEXAMETERS. In both poems, Catullus' treatment of the hexameter differs from that of Lucretius, as falling more largely under later Greek influence. Both of these poets, who published their poems very much about the same time, are inferior in versification to Virgil, who, however, has occasionally imitated some of their metrical peculiarities. Both Lucretius and Catullus wrote single verses rather than paragraphs—that is to say, the end of a clause generally coincides with the end of a line: the monotony, and also the wordiness, which this practice caused, was avoided by Virgil, and an immeasurably greater variety in effect was obtained by him, when (in the Georgics and the Aeneid) he wrote passage by passage, not verse by verse, distributing his periods among several lines with an artistic arrangement of the pauses. The Eclogues are naturally nearer to the older treatment of the hexameter than the longer poems. While we admit, as we must, the comparative want of variety shown by an examination of the rhythm of Catullus' hexameter, as judged by the standard of Lucretius and still more of Virgil, we must, however, remember that the latter poets wrote, the one more than seven thousand verses, the other more than twelve thousand, Catullus not five hundred; and that monotony of rhythm in a poem of sixty or even of four hundred lines, is a different thing from such monotony in works ten or twenty times longer. It is only by deliberate comparison that the rhythm of Catullus' hexameter is found to be monotonous.

The following is a detailed account of the facts of the hexameter in Catullus:—

1. The first two feet are cut off from the rest of the verse

(e.g., 'Nutricum tenuis,' LXIV. 18), 5 times in LXII., 28 times in LXIV. Virgil¹ only uses the ruder rhythm exceptionally, and in passages where he imitates Catullus or Lucretius: in the latter it is quite common.

2. In the third foot the caesura — —|— (instead of the more ordinary —|— —) occurs 7 times in LXII., 28 times in LXIV. This is commoner in Lucretius, and is frequent in Virgil, especially in the Eclogues.

3. Bucolic caesura. The fourth foot closes with the end of a word (generally a spondee) 27 times in LXII., 247 times in LXIV. This is a favourite rhythm (if not quite so frequently found) in Lucretius; but—although occurring about 240 times in the Eclogues (which contain 829 vv.)—it is generally avoided by Virgil in his other poems.

4. Catullus belonged to the σπονδειαζόντες: 6 times in LXII., and 26 times in LXIV. only one dactyl is found in a verse, in the fourth or fifth foot, and twice (LXIV. 3, 44) the last five feet are all spondees. There are in LXIV. 27 dispondaic endings, of which 8 are preceded by a dissyllable containing two shorts (— —). Dispondaic endings are comparatively rare in Lucretius, and a trispondaic ending is unknown. In Virgil spondaic endings are imitations from the Greek or perhaps Alexandrine affectations. If the last word is a tetrasyllable in Virgil it is also a proper name (so 10 times; exc. Ecl. iv. 49, Aen. III. 549): not so in Catullus, who in LXIV. has 22 dispondaic tetrasyllabic endings. When a dispondaic ending is not also a tetrasyllable, it violates the usual law of the Latin hexameter which requires metrical ictus and verbal accent to correspond in the last two feet of the verse. This irregularity occurs 5 times in LXIV., and at least 13 times in Virgil.

5. Catullus ends a verse with a monosyllable twice, LXII. 45, LXIV. 315; Virgil 28 times; Lucretius often—all violating the law which requires the coincidence of verbal accent and metrical ictus at the close of the verse. Once (LXIV. 55) two dissyllables (not dispondaic) break the same law: in the Georgics thrice, at least, and a dozen times in the last books of the Aeneid. A tetrasyllable (not dispondaic) occurs twice in LXII. (hymenaeus), the same word being found in a similar position in LXIV. twice, and calathisci once. Virgil has hymenaeus at the end of a verse 10 times, hyacinthus 5 times; but also ululatu, lacrimisque. These also involve a discordance of ictus and accent, and (before the last two Greek words) a lengthening of a short syllable. Virgil of course freely ends with similar tetrasyllables when they are proper names. Once in LXII., twice in LXIV., the last word is pentasyllabic. Such endings (as also tetrasyllabic endings not requiring discordance of ictus and accent) are much liked by Lucretius. More than a dozen pentasyllabic proper names end Virgil's verses: add to them incipitemque (Aen. v. 589), quadrupedantum (XII. 614).

6. Of elisions between fourth and fifth foot there are 2 in LXII., 9 in LXIV. These are not rare in Lucretius or Virgil (-que is generally the elided syllable). Elisions between fifth and sixth feet appear once in LXII., 5 times in LXIV.: they are not at all avoided by Lucretius, and he is occasionally imitated by Virgil, but rarely, in this respect. Catullus, generally, is less harsh in his elisions in his hexameters than in his other metres.

7. There is one Hypermeter in Catullus (LXIV. 298) as there is one in Lucretius (v. 849); Virgil has about a score, the last syllable being in all but two cases -que.

H. In Catullus, alone among Latin poets, the ELEGIAC retains its original form, its Greek freedom, ease and elasticity. In other hands, even in those of Propertius, but more than all in the hands of Ovid, this metre became Latinized, and underwent a change, similar to (but far greater than) the change undergone by the hexameter as finally represented in Virgil, or the Sapphic or Alcaic in Horace. The fundamental originality of the Roman genius nowhere reveals itself so clearly, to just examination, as in the use which it made of what it borrowed, or rather annexed, from the literature of Greece. The elder tragedy, the elder comedy, speculative philosophy, and the simple lyric, were soon left alone as incompatible with the native mind. But the epic and the elegiac and the epigram, like new provinces, could be conquered, could adopt Roman laws, submit to and survive a Roman reconstruction. A loss of freedom could be compensated by dignity, a loss of ease by symmetry, a loss of spontaneity by precision, a loss of nature by art. The transformation of a province and of poetry under Roman rule meant death to the old forms, but regeneration into new forms of perfection. At the same time, in both cases, some room might still remain for regret; and we cannot but regret that others did not arise to continue, after Catullus, the freer growth, the more fluent and natural and less artificial maturity, of the Greek elegaic. For he has left some whole poems and many passages which show, like Caesar's plans, what might have been but for the "Ides of March."

Of Catullus 642 elegiacs remain (LXV.-CXVI). Ovid's rules, such as the close of a thought with a couplet, the avoidance of elision, especially in the latter half both of the hexameter and the pentameter, the preponderance of dactyls, the ending of the couplet with a dissyllable, which must be either noun or verb, or the like, were not observed by Catullus. In the hexameter he has 9 monosyllabic endings, 9 tetrasyllabic, 9 dispondaic, 2 pentasyllabic (LXVIII. 105, XCVII. 5). One hexameter (CXIV. 3) consists of six spondees. In the pentameter there is one monosyllabic ending (LXVI. 8), 83 trisyllabic endings, 98 tetrasyllabic, 17 pentasyllabic, 1 heptasyllabic (LXVIII. 72); and 34 adjectival endings. Elision occurs between the first and second halves of the pentameter 16 times; hiatus thrice. There is a pure hiatus, LXVI. 11; one modified hiatus, CXIV. 6, and one elision of s, CXVI. 8.

The few minor peculiarities of Catullus' Prosody are mentioned in the Notes.

THE DICTION OF CATULLUS.

One of the greatest charms of Catullus lies in the simplicity and naturalness of his language, which are in great contrast to the later artificial Latin style. In this 'inimitable spontaneity' he is 'the most Greek of all the Latin poets.' He is free from Grecism, however, as he is free from everything artificial or archaic or affected, both in vocabulary and in syntax. However difficult the metre in which he writes, however subtle the thought he would convey, he is never intricate and never obscure. His words seem to have fallen of themselves into metre without leaving their natural order, and would make good prose—if they were not poetry. His language, in the epigrams, lyrics, and elegiacs, is little removed from ordinary speech. He is full of familiar phrases; he is fond of the diminutives¹ of affectionate or merry talk; he uses the tongue of the wits of the town, the lips of the lover of real life. Even his Greek words were those heard in common conversation. In the truest sense, he followed a. Greek nominative singular :

Acme, XLV. 10 (cf. parthenice, LXI. 194); Cybele, LXIII.; Pasitheā, LXIII. 43; Phryx, LXIII. 22.

b. Greek genitive singular :

Cybeles, LXIII.; Arsinoes, LXVI. 54; Locridos, ib.

c. Greek dative singular :

d. Greek accusative singular :

Acmen, XLV. 1; Booten, LXVI. 67; Amphitriten, LXIV. 11; Attin, LXIII. 42; Athon, LXVI. 46; Thesea, LXIV. 246; Pelea, 21; Propontida, IV. 9; Ancona, XXXVI. 13; Amathunta, ib. 14; Minoa, LXIV. 86; Callisto, LXVI. 66.

e. Greek vocative singular :

Amastri, IV. 13; Socraton, LXVII. 1; Theseu, LXIV. 70; Peleu, 27.

f. Greek nominative plural :

Nereidēs, LXIV. 15.

g. Greek accusative plural :

h. Greek genitive plural :

Chalybum (Χαλύβων), LXVI. 48.

5. SPECIAL FORMS. (i.) Catullus is free from archaisms, unless the term must be applied to the following small list :

citarier, LXI. 42.	recepso, XLIV. 19.	alis, LXVI. 28 ; alid, comparier, LXI. 65.	tetulit, LXIII. 47, 51 ;	XXIX. 15.

nostis, LXVII. 37.	cognossem, XCI. 3.
promisti, CX. 3.	servisse, LXVII. 3.	juerint, LXVI. 18.

(iii.) New Compounds. Although the earlier Roman poets freely formed new compound words, the language seems to have lost this power (a loss wisely regretted by Horace, A.P. 55) at the close of the Republic. In Lucretius there are about fifty newly-coined words, in Catullus less than twenty ; and in both cases most of these words were little or never used by subsequent classical writers. Catullus has all points of his progress. It enables him, also, to keep his own faults concealed, with perfect models constantly in view for imitation. Every experienced teacher knows the advantage of the slip copy, but its practical application has never before been successfully accomplished. This feature is secured exclusively to Macmillan's Copy-books under Goodman's patent.

An inspection of books written on the old plan, with copies at the head of the page, will show that the lines last written at the bottom are almost invariably the poorest. The copy has been too far from the pupil's eye to be of any practical use, and a repetition and exaggeration of his errors have been the result.

Book VI. is fitted for higher Classes, and as an Introduction to English Literature.

“They are far above any others that have appeared both in form and substance. . . . The editor of the present series has rightly seen that reading books must ‘aim chiefly at giving to the pupils the power of accurate, and, if possible, apt and skilful expression ; at cultivating in them a good literary taste, and at arousing a desire of further reading. This is done by taking care to select the extracts from true English classics, going up in Standard VI. course to Chaucer, Hooker, and Bacon, as well as Wordsworth, Macaulay, and Froude. . . . This is quite on the right track, and indicates justly the ideal which we ought to set before us.”—GUARDIAN.
